

How Gals Make Enemies And Lose Their Friends

By MERRILL JOHNS DAILY

EVERY YOU can do it. You even a flake, good-natured, friendly girl, can make a few enemies in a short time. It's not so much the thing she does as the way she does it. You can't help it. You've got to be a little bit of a show-off. You've got to be a little bit of a show-off. You've got to be a little bit of a show-off.

Just don't understand how a girl would do such a silly thing to a nice fellow like him. Help repair his battered ego. And soon he'll be spending all his Friday nights with you. And there you've done it.

You've gotten the boy and lost a friend in the process. Or maybe you'll be forced as frequently as the fellow will find out that you've been leading him a fast line of chatter and you can count him as your friend's friendly rival. Two new enemies will just one campaign - you're clever, all right!

First pick a fellow. Albeit any boy will do, just as long as he's going steady with one of your friends. You know all your friends' best boys. You know them all. You know them all. You know them all. You know them all.

Or perhaps you can start a campaign of talking about your acquaintances behind their backs. This is a simple thing to do. Whenever the conversation gets around to personalities you like to know here and there and send all your friends' reputations down.
