

Journal

Published by the Common Journal Co., Inc., 100 South Street, Boston, N. Y. Telephone BR 2-1234. Second-class postage paid at Boston, N. Y. Postmaster: Please send address changes to Common Journal, 100 South Street, Boston, N. Y.

Father Gillis Says: Communists' Tireless Zeal Must Be Matched

Some weeks ago in this space I said something about Communism as a crusade. The idea was that the Communists go at the job of ruining our civilization and our religion with a great deal more zeal and drive than we put into the defense of what we hold dear. I cited a few passages from Victor Kravchenko's revealing book, "I and the Devil." He and his fellow in Russia would work in a factory for 16 or 18 hours a day and instead of going home to rest, or going to a bar to drink and to relax, would attend meetings far into the night, or even into the morning, to listen to speeches and take part in discussion. They gave to Communism, as we say, "a devotion worthy of a better cause."

Communists' Tireless Zeal Must Be Matched

So the non-Communists leave. "I have to be at work in the morning," they say, as if Communists don't have to be at work at the same time. Or, "I'll just call Columbia from the good woman if I don't get home before the milkman." Communists seem to have no "good woman" or their women are as fierce and tireless as the men. Neither the men nor the women working for Russia all over the world have any regard for fatigue if they can put something over for their cause when the bourgeois have gone home to sleep.

The Yardstick By Ron Higgins

The Romans had a phrase for it — "He who proves too much proves nothing." But it sometimes happens that he who proves too much proves something that he never meant to prove at all — something, in fact, that he probably doesn't even want to talk about.

Management Proves too Much

Industry, which is at the same time one of the basic reasons that management is sometimes held in respect and looked upon with suspicion.

They Paraphrased

They paraphrased and twisted the meaning of the words of the speaker. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

AS WE SEE IT

Now is it done? What's the trick? How can a man control thousands? The answer has been indicated. The little group wears the big sword down. Communists are trained. They know how to get the floor and when they get it they hold it. They talk interminably. They speak in a low, steady, unbroken tone. They speak in a low, steady, unbroken tone.

An Historic Blunder

President Truman's blunder in the White House speech is a historic blunder. It is a blunder that will be remembered for generations to come. It is a blunder that will be remembered for generations to come.

Persecution in China

Washington — This is a story of persecution and torture of men and women and children by the Communist forces in China. It is a story of the persecution of the Catholic clergy in Communist China, in Spain, in Mexico, and in our own day.

FROM A BOMB CRADLE

Oak Ridge Reader Hails Article on Hiroshima. Dear Editor: Congratulations on your prompt use of John Hersey's story of the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima. We are sending our copy to all our friends and neighbors.

Copyright 1946 by Common Journal. From Mother Jones, Boston.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.

They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended. They took the words out of context and made them mean something entirely different from what the speaker intended.