The Yardstick By Rev. Ignace

One of the cardinal principles of Catholic social teaching is the so-called "principle of subsidiarity." The principle is stated as follows in the encyclical Quadragesimo Anno: "Just as it is gravely wrong to take from individuals what they can accomplish by their own initiative and industry and give it to the community, so also it is an injustice, and at the same time a grave evil and disturbance of right order, to assign to a greater and more central organization what lesser and subordinate organizations can do."

manship of TVA, he warned the delegates to the Fifteenth Annual Conference of the National Municipal League that the very foundation of democratic government was threatened because the policy of encouraging and subsidizing the responsibilities of local government has given way to an increasing centralization of administration in the national capital.

They're a funny bunch, these kings and queens. Elizabeth's father - a scoundrel father - Henry VIII, had been a poor Catholic. He wrote a book in defense of the seven sacraments, and in recompense was given the title "Defender of the Faith" by the Pope. Well, you don't expect the Pope to be catholic.

Reading that dispatch from Italy I remembered a particularly fine article in the American Mercury for June, 1945, in which the writer, Isaac Hays explained that Communists in Italy had been given orders at that time to play up to the Church and that they were doing so.

There are probably only a handful of men in the United States who have had as much experience and as much success as Mr. David Lillenthal in trying to work out a practical and effective application of the general principle of subsidiarity in American political and economic life.

Fortunately, however, Mr. Lillenthal's public record clearly indicates that he himself would be the first to deny that he ever intended his name to be misinterpreted in this fashion.

AS WE SEE IT: Radio Falls Down

Since the inception of radio broadcasting some of its more ardent advocates have insisted that this marvelous means of communication eventually would supplant the daily newspaper.
