

300,000 Cheer Papal 'Anti-Clericism' Reply

Rome's liberation and to thank God for having spared their city. He spoke of that "memorable" Sunday of 1945, when he exhorted Romans gathered to break the protection of Heaven, not to forget their Christian duties of piety, of virtue and of brotherly love, and to guard the heritage left to them by their forefathers.

In the war year of 1944, it was the city and the people of Rome who faced grave dangers. In 1946, it was the Church, her visible head, and her ministers who were being attacked. And today's demonstration left no doubt in the minds of all observers that Romans have not forgotten to whom they owe their salvation.

They were deeply stirred when the Holy Father told them that the fate of the sons and daughters of Rome is always the object of his thoughts and prayers, his care and solicitude, in days of adversity and prosperity.

"You have come," the Holy Father said, "to proclaim before your fellow citizens of Rome, to the nation and to the entire Christian world that you are closely bound to the See of Peter and to the Catholic traditions of your native city, bound in a holy unity that overcomes all hostility and all obstacles."

Again, tremendous cheers arose when the Pontiff appealed to Romans to prove themselves worthy of the "innumerable ranks of your martyrs and your saints (that) are watching you," and to be guided by a consciousness of their grave responsibilities and duties arising from Rome's "singular mission."

The Holy Father repeated the stirring summons of St. Peter, who "surrounded by the threats of a perverted imperial power," called out:

"Be strong in the faith."

In the struggling between two opposing camps: "For Christ and against Christ," for the Church, and against the Church," Romans must again heed this call of the first Peter, the Holy Father said, adding:

"Awaken, Romans! The hour has sounded for many of you to awaken from a sleep that has been too long, the hour to arise and act, and to suffer bravely, as becomes Romans."

Long before the appointed hour, St. Peter's Square began to fill. The crowds came by car and truck, by streetcar and bus.

Pope's Health Said Improved

The Pope's health is reported to be improving. The Pope is reported to be sleeping better and his health is said to be generally sounder than it was a few days ago.

EXILE SOUGHT FOR PONTIFF

It is taken to mean that this anti-clerical propaganda is not of great help to communists. It is taken to mean that it contributes to the spread of atheism, and of indirect help because it can be transformed into tools of exhortation.

As already reported, the Journal Don Basilio was condemned by the Congregation of the Holy Office, and its publishers and editors were threatened with excommunication. As a result of this step, Don Basilio had to change its printers and is now being produced in a plant which theoretically belongs to the Italian Workers' Union - therefore also to the present Christian Union - but which, in fact, is controlled by the socialist-Communist. Protesters by the heads of the Christian Union have had no result.

Soon after the protests had been made, that very same printing firm began the publication of the most scurrilous of the anti-clerical papers. It is said that the socialist-Communist, even if they were the originators of the new wave of anti-clericalism, are now encouraging and using it.

For what reason? That is not yet quite clear. They know that such weapons, even if they are effective, especially among the youth, lack any decisive value. One may, perhaps, ask whether the socialist-Communist, by encouraging such a campaign of slander against the Church, hope to create a wedge in order to demand a halt of the anti-clerical propaganda now being waged by the Catholic press.

There is also the possibility that the socialist-Communist may desire to win support of the Christian Democrats for the new Italian press law, which might then be also applied to the advantage of the Communist party.

It is, however, necessary to point out that the Catholic press in discussing communism has never stooped to attacks on personalities, nor has it ever used the methods of calumny employed by the anti-clerical press.

What is the attitude of the Holy See in the face of such vulgar attacks on the Holy Father's prestige? Protesters were lodged as soon as the person of the Pontiff was outraged. The Italian government was reminded of its obligations under the existing Concordat. At about the same time, the Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office issued its decree in condemnation of Don Basilio.

More recently the Apostolic Nuncio to Italy made representations to the ministry of foreign affairs. These representations, as the result of indiscretions on the part of persons very close to the foreign minister, Pietro Nenni, were communicated to the press and served to intensify the anti-clerical propaganda.

Pope Honors 3 Laymen in Hartford Diocese
Hartford (N.C.) Three laymen of the Hartford diocese have been honored by His Holiness Pope Pius XII by designation as Knights of the Order of St. Gregory the Great. It has been announced here. They are John J. McKinnon, business man, and Matthew A. Reynolds, attorney, of New Haven, and Edward J. Hickey, Commissioner of Connecticut State Police, of Hartford.
