ward Latin America. Moscow's views, besides, are world news for newspapers of every political complexion. The local Communist parties have their own newspapers in most of the Latin-American republics.

Moscow Oriented Groups Studied
 7. -a- the purpose of this correspondence on the Latin American can tour to interest himself only in international Communist groups, which take their policy line from Moscow, as distinguished from native radical movements, some of which have definite Marxist foundations but remain independent of Soviet influence.

It is the problem of foreign control, however indirectly exercised, that makes the Communist movement in Latin America a threat to the United States, although, as noted before, none of the individual parties appears likely to win the governmental control in the near future.

By their constant parroting of the theme that the Soviet Union always is right, and the United States always is wrong, no matter what the issue that divides them anywhere in the world, the local Communists constitute a highly vocal dissident bloc from continental solidarity. They contend, on the one hand, that the United States ought to give the atomic bomb to the Soviet Union, but that it shouldn't give modern American arms and military leadership to the American republics as part of an effort to coordinate and perfect hemispheric defense.

Monroe Doctrine Challenged

This vast Communist organizing effort, undertaken in the interests of the Soviet Union and in an effort to introduce the Soviet political system on the American Continent, is a direct challenge to the doctrine enunciated by President James Monroe in 1823, who warned against European political penetration in the Western Hemisphere at the same time he was declaring his opposition to new colonial ventures by the Holy Alliance.

Opposition to the transfer of American territory to European power is the best known feature of the Monroe Doctrine, but it is important to recall that the message also declared that "it is impossible that the allied powers should extend their political system to any portion of either continent (North or South Amer-peace and happiness; nor can anyone believe that our southern brethren, if left to themselves, would adopt it of their own accord."

From the strategic point of view, it should always be remembered that the leaders of the Soviet State have looked upon local Communist movements throughout the world as active fifth column. In the event of "imperialistic wars" against the Soviet Union or in which the Soviet Union remained neutral.

Generalissimo Joseph Stalin's famous 1922 speech in Lenin-grad, to which the attention of the Soviet public recently has been called, included directives to the Communist parties to create a "united front of workers of the advanced countries and of the ruling classes of the colonies in order to ward off the dangers of war, or, if war came, to turn imperialist war into civil war, to smash fascism, to overthrow capitalism, to set up Soviet power, to free the colonies from slavery and to organize world-wide defense of the first workers' republic in history."

These parents deny, in 1963, not being defective children. And there is no possible way of knowing whether they will or not. They give no evidence of the characteristic themselves. Even no adverse correlation between them, would not affect 50 per cent of them who are usually defined as heretics. Nor would it influence in any way those who are defective because of external or environmental factors.

The truth is, nature herself can do much better. More and more is the study of heresy bringing out the fact that nature

The well-known psychiatrist, Dr. Francis Mott, was persuaded, as a result of extensive invasive patterns, that insanity tends not to run beyond three generations, because there is either regression to the normal type or the stock dies out. He also makes the point that, if nervous and mental instability seem to be predominant today, this is, more rationally explained by the worry of modern life than by any fanciful theory of inheritance.

to its proposed objectives, it would, on the other hand, do much harm. For example, it would lead to an increase in immorality and social diseases. Girls, sterilized and then released upon society, would be taken advantage of. The spread of social diseases would follow from the promiscuity of these mentally deficient individuals.

Another serious danger of sterilization lies in the abuses such a power could lead to if placed in the hands of the State. There is already a considerable amount of evidence to this efviolable rights of citizens. To say the least, it leaves the door to totalitarianism ajar. Unfortunately, the Supreme Court has upheld the State's right to sterilize its citizens, using the almost childish illogical argument that sterilization is analogous to conscription for defense and vaccination to prevent disease. But there simply is no parity in the analogy. The direct object and purpose of sterilization is the destruction of a function, the violation of the inalienable right to bodily integrity while vaccination can never be more than the occasion of sickness.

An invasion of the individual right of the individual to bodily integrity. It is also a violation of the individual rights of the Creator over one of His creatures. Are we to use our intelligence to foster this immoral principle on the subject people of Japan? Or are we even to compromise while it is being done?
