American scholarship and Catholic acholarship in America has been notably late in discovering the poetry of Jessics Powers. And be it added that the Gallery of Living Authors has been sadly to miss in adulting the great | Italy modern, Joseph Campauthor to its ranks. Several years ago when the Hernatine Press in Elchmond IIII, New York, printed her first work, While the Lantern Buran, it was the critics from the gradcate schools who came to recognize her work as a defttitle contribution to American literature. I do not refer to all critics and editors in this regard, for her poetry is known to readers of The Sign, The Catholic Worker, The Commonweal, Harpers, The New York Times -and a few other periodicals that prefer to deal with quality rather than boast of their circulation: those weeklies and dailies that prefer to make no play to the mob and who, out of integrity would not don the mantle of persecution or the Jensica Pewers is a slight, energetic woman who mingled in the throngs of modern society until a few years ago. Today she is a cloistered Carmelite nun in a convent in her home state of Wisconsin, Now in her early forties, this eager, fresh poet and mystic has given the world another slender volume of work and added another fewel to the little-studded tlara of American verse. There is a single line comes to mind when you have finished reading some of Jessica Powers work. It is that line

The Power To Forgive -By Rev. Richard Ginder-

Practically every Christian admits that Jesus had the power to lorgive sins . If we believe, as most of us do, that Jesus was God. To cito only a lew instances, He forgave the sins of Mary Magdalen (Luke 7.47), of the woman taken in adultery (John, 8,11), of the man sick with palsy (Matthew 8.2), and of the repentant thief on the Cross (Luke 23.43).

And wimee, being God, He was almighty, He could share that power of forgiving sins. The question, now, is - did

Yes. to St. Peter, Chief of the Apostles, He gave the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven and said, "Whatsoever thou shalt bind upon earth, it shall be bound also in heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose upon earth, it shall be loosed also in heaven" (Matthew 16, 19). Then on the evening after His Resurrection, He appeared room and said to them: "Peaco be to you. As the Father hath sent me, I also send you." When He had said this, He breathed on them; and He said largive, they are largiven them, and whose sins you shall iotain, they are intained" (John 20,19-23).

But has not this power died with the Apostles? No. because it was given to them as officials of the Church, just as the power to veto the acts of Congress is given to the President, as an official of the United States. It didn't die with the first President, but passed on immediately to his successor, and so on down the line.

And further, priests have always used that God-given pow er over sin every time they haptized a person, freeing him not only from the original sin of Adam and Eve, but from all the guilt that might have been on his soul. That, of course, is only one of the three ways in which the Church dispenses nardon from sin doomed race.

The source! From Scripture! "The Lord promised he would dwell in a cloud." (2 Par. vi. 1.) But the ability to fashion such lines? This comes only in high creatures who have disciplined their minds to the, demands of great verse and their souls to the long and fonely and joyful journeys in the realm of the spirit.
