Urge Compromise On School Aid

he thought that the School Lunch program "went to the heart" of Dr. Fowler's objections, that he didn't see how the minister could admit the value of the lunch program on the one hand, and express his violent fears about aid to nonpublic schools as embodied in the Taft or Aiken Bills on the other hand.

Among others who have appeared before the Senate Subcommittee on Education, together with a resume of the views, are:

Miss Selma Borchardt, appearing for Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor. She spoke out in favor of providing public services for all school children, regardless of whether they are in public or non-public schools. She said that such a provision had been written into the GI Education Act, and said that she had not noticed any resultant "union of Church and State."

Joseph Landis and Orwin Kuenzli, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, for the American Federation of Teachers. Both represented views similar to those of Miss Borchardt and the A. F. of L.

Dr. David Petegorsky, executive director of the American Jewish Congress, representing 1,000,000 American Jews, who favors the Taft Bill, but with provision for aid to nonpublic schools eliminated. He said he is not opposed in principle to the provision of public health services, transportation and school lunches in private and parochial schools, but is against such aids at this time, and particularly against such aid coming from the Federal Government.

PTA Records Opposition

Miss Eleanor Neff, of the Women's Division of The Methodist Church, representing 1,250,000 women, who recorded her strong disapproval to any aid to nonpublic schools on the ground that it would "encourage the growth of sectarian schools and would undermine the American public education system and endanger democracy."

Mrs. Stanley G. Cook of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, who opposed the giving of federal funds to private schools even if a particular State permitted it.

David I. Ashe, of the United Parents Association of New York City. He opposed any form, direct or indirect, of federal aid to private and sectarian schools; and expressed disagreement with the Supreme Court's decision in the New Jersey school bus case.

Kermit Eby, of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. He testified for federal aid in general, was non-committal on aid to non-public schools.

Miss Sarah Walsh, of the United States, County and Municipal Workers (CIO), who objected strenuously to giving any kind of aid to children of parochial schools.
