

Palestine Christian Recognition Asked

By ROBERT ANTHONY BRUA.
Special Staff Writer
The news that the United Nations committee on Palestine had asked with the appointment of a special representative of Palestine as an anti-ethnic investigation, has been a source of concern to many Christians in the United States. The committee's action is seen as a step toward the recognition of the Jewish people as a nation, which would mean the end of the Balfour Declaration of 1917, which had promised the Jewish people a "national home" in Palestine.

The committee's action is also seen as a step toward the recognition of the Jewish people as a nation, which would mean the end of the Balfour Declaration of 1917, which had promised the Jewish people a "national home" in Palestine.

Hungarians in 'Misery,' Cardinal Declares; Ex-Premier Says He Is Oppressed's Trustee

New York (AP) — His Eminence Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, Primate of Hungary, told a press conference here that for the past two years all Hungary has been living in "dire misery" and is still in desperate need of food, clothing and medical supplies.

He received the press in the offices of War Relief Services—National Catholic Welfare Conference and spoke entirely in Latin.

Relief sent to the people of Hungary by the people of America, especially through War Relief Services—N.C.W.C., has, he said, saved thousands of lives and ameliorated the suffering of children, the aged, the blind and the maimed.

Cardinal Mindszenty emphasized that he had not come here with "a political object or to tell anything of a political character." On the grounds that they were "political questions," he refused to reply to two queries put by reporters. The queries were: "Will you see Nagy (former Hungarian premier) while you are here?" and "Did you find relief work in Hungary more difficult to perform during the last two weeks?"

"I have come," he said, "to thank all the people of America for their good works and first of all to thank the people of the United States for having helped us in our misery, especially during the last two years. Our Hungarian people have suffered terribly because of the war. Most of the aid we have received has come from this very office in which I sit today. If it had not been sent, thousands would have died, thousands who are in misery would have been in deeper misery. We shall never be ungrateful of the American people or of what they have done in the past two years."

Asked how long he thought Hungary would need relief, he replied, "I am not a prophet." He added that because of "terrible droughts and terrible floods, lack of plows and other agricultural implements and lack of seeds, there was little prospect of a harvest in Hungary."

Referring to conditions in Budapest, the cardinal said that from last August until recently, when relief supplies gave out, he had served 14,000 meals a day to the poor. So many were starving, he said, that each person could be given only one meal a day.

Cardinal Mindszenty said that he had been in Hungary since 1926, and that he had seen the country in its worst state. He said that he had seen the country in its worst state.

Hungary's Church Burns

Budapest (AP) — Work has already begun to repair the damage caused last week by fire in the massive cupola of Hungary's largest church, St. Stephen's Basilica here. The Hungarian government has appropriated 1,000,000 forints (about $20,000 at the official rate of exchange) toward reconstruction costs. According to the police, there is no criminal responsibility for the fire, which broke out last Friday morning while workers were engaged in making repairs on the cupola.

Several hundred volunteers aided firemen, who succeeded in confining the flames to the outside covering of the cupola and preserving the steel girders, thus preventing the collapse of the huge dome.

School Aid Bill Editorial Gets Prelate's Reply

Washington (AP) — Archbishop James H. Ryan of Omaha in a letter to The Washington Post has taken issue with the paper's editorial observation that the amended Taft-Thomas-Hill Federal aid to education bill now before the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee is "strictly a States' rights bill."

The Archbishop, who is chairman of the Education Department, National Catholic Welfare Conference, listed five specific "obvious Federal controls" in the bill, and said that he "should have greater respect for The Post" were the paper to say frankly that it favors at least one form of Federal control: one to implement the Post's position that "it is a bad idea to give public funds to nonpublic schools."

The local daily had written in regard to the compromise Senate measure: "The Taft-Thomas-Hill bill is strictly a States' rights bill. . . . We think it a bad idea to give public funds to nonpublic schools. Nevertheless, this is a matter in which the States are entitled to exercise their discretion."

"The Post cannot have it both ways," the Archbishop replied, and said that it could not recommend that the states be controlled in some things and left free in others; if the Federal Government forces the states "to deal fairly with schools for minority," consistently it should compel the States to be equitable toward children in nonpublic schools.

Referring to the proviso in the Taft bill that the State may spend Federal money only in those schools which are "a part of the program of public education within the State," Archbishop Ryan said:

"Administrators of most nonpublic schools will not be deceived by the Taft bill's ambiguous provision presumably permitting the States to make nonpublic schools a part of their program of public education. In any event, these schools would be unwilling to sacrifice their identity as nonpublic schools in return for a few crumbs of Federal aid."

Hospital Religion Bar
