

Catholic College Plan In Leader Training Cited

Are our Catholic colleges training leaders? was the question chosen for discussion at the second faculty-student meeting of the year at Nazareth College attended by representatives of all classes and campus organizations as well as members of the lay and religious society, Monday evening, Feb. 22.

Miss Elaine Kozlowski, president of the Undergraduates Association, presided and the discussion was led by Miss Anne McLoughlin, a member of the Senior Class. The part played by faculty, students and by the student themselves in leadership training formed the basis for the discussion.

Dean Thomas Mark, the Dean of the College, called attention to the fact that the training of leaders is a responsibility of the college. The importance of this training, rather than the past emphasis on the acquisition of knowledge was stressed. The Rev. William H. Shannon, professor of religion at the college, at a special session in the gymnasium, stressed the importance of leadership in the student body.

The chairman of activities at Nazareth College has requested that the student body be organized into groups for the purpose of working with the spirit of leadership in their place. ANY Pianist CAN PLAY this Organ

It's hard to believe that this exquisite little electronic organ, producing such glorious Cathedral tones, is so simple to play as any piano. Yet Michael-Ester is a favorite in churches and private homes because any pianist can quickly master its single keyboard. Compact as a piano, amazingly low in price, this is the organ that has everything!

Two Yugoslavian Nuns Jailed. Church Desecrated

London—(NC)—Any Yugoslav who would dare assert that religion is suffering persecution in his country makes himself liable to punishment under the law or "Crimes Against the People," according to a refugee from Yugoslavia who has just arrived here with reports of new outrages in the Communists' war on the Church.

This fact should be borne in mind," the refugee explained, "in evaluating the assertion of seven American Protestant ministers that they found no trace of religious persecution during their visit to Yugoslavia last year. If any of the persons whom they interviewed during their tour of the country had been bold enough to give them facts demonstrating the existence of religious persecution, he would have incurred the risk of severe punishment."

The informant brought news of the violent desecration of a Catholic church in the village of Margecan, and of the imprisonment of two nuns for destroying the "people's" will to work" by taking part in pilgrimages. If three Communists, the refugee related, entered the church at Margecan during the night and practically ruined its interior. Statues were pulled down and smashed, and benches were overturned. Chalice and ciboria were destroyed in the sacrilege.

The door of the Tabernacle was forced open and the Blessed Sacrament was scattered over the church floor. The Communists poured oil from the sanctuary lamps over the Sacred Hosts and then trampled them underfoot.

The two nuns, Sister Marys and Angela Zizek, were "tried" together with four other Slovene Catholics in Ljubljana. They were accused, according to the newspaper Slovenski Porocevali, of spreading information about

Geography, HOW YOU'VE CHANGED!

The globes and maps of Sally's grandma's time are out of date. Pup Dog. Even the ones of ten years ago need correcting. The geography of electric service has changed too. Way before the war we began drawing a new power map—with added and enlarged plants, substations and highlines. We can now generate twice as much power as in 1939. 100,000 more horsepower of generating equipment are on order. By the end of 1950 we will have spent about $93,000,000—ninety-three million dollars—in new construction and improvements since 1939. That is equal to our total property in 1939.

NEW POWER MAP of South Central New York

This shows our main power system in the central area—now about 413 miles of high tension lines connecting five large steam generating plants (black stars) and eight small hydro generating plants (open stars). (Shaded areas show where we also serve gas.) Broken lines indicate approximately 200 miles of further extensions to our main 114,000 volt lines, in the engineering stage or proposed. The new 43,000 horsepower generating plant under construction at East Corning will be completed next fall. Generating equipment to double the capacity of our 60,000 horsepower station at Dresden and our 45,000 horsepower station at Bainbridge has been on order for many months. Our central electric system is tied in with the power systems of neighboring companies from which we purchase power, and they in turn are connected with other systems beyond, so that all the power resources of the east in reality are linked with our own.
