Released-Time Study Held Legal in Kentucky
Frankfort, Ky.—RNS—Public school pupils can be excused for religious instruction outside the school without violating the United States Supreme Court's ruling on the subject.
This opinion was expressed here by W. Owen Keller, assistant attorney general of Kentucky.
Keller's opinion was given at the request of Russell E. Bridges, superintendent of City schools at Fort Thomas, in northern Kentucky.
The assistant attorney general said that "as long as religious education is not taught on the school grounds or in the school room, there can be no objection."
