The Career Girl Woman's New Freedom Calls For Duties Too

By MARIE WEIDMAN Rochester Catholic Charities There was once a simple French girl, who, without guile or subterfuge made a number of English generals look pretty stupid. The records show that what Joan of Arc did was to help establish the conception of nationalism; but her achievement helps indicate another fact which has little bearing on political history.

War II women were 'armily entrenched as alleged equals of men. Their war service record has been brilliant as they conscientiously did monotonous jobs.

Women have become gradually more and more assertive. Their quest for self-expression, aided and abetted by the dilemmas of war and depression, seems to be almost fulfilled. Today thousands of women are in key industrial positions, in professions; they own firms and businesses, spend eighty per cent of the nation's income.

With the holocaust of World War II, the career woman has become a familiar figure.

Conventions

Miss Mary C. Duffy, South Orange, N. J., Supreme Regent of the Catholic Daughters of America, will preside at the 22nd national biennial convention of the C.D.A., to be held at Pasadena, Calif., July 12-18.

At Our House Our Neighbor Indulges In Child Psychology

By MARY TINGLE DALY This afternoon I was in the midst of an angel food cake - figuratively speaking.

Evans. "It's psychologically bad. It denotes a complete lack of understanding of the value of other people's time as well as a tendency to seek anonymity - very bad signs in children. Such leanings in childhood lead to the type of people who write blackmailing letters and who - shall we say 'sponge' on others - like borrowing pencils and being otherwise dependent and unself-reliant."

"Well, Mrs. Daly," went on the smooth voice, "this is a scientific research bureau and we're calling to see if your refrigerator is running."

"Why, yes, it is," I answered, relieved. "Then you'd better go catch it," laughed the unknown voice at the other end of the wire.

Luckily neither the egg whites nor the resulting cake suffered. But later in the afternoon, a similar call came and that time I was in the bathtub.

"Hello," said a voice with a repressed giggle. "Is this the lady that washes?"

"No, it isn't," I said irritably, rising to the bath again.

"I hesitate to speak of this," Mrs. Daly," began Mrs. Evans, "but I feel you should know it for your own good."

"Fact is," Mr. Evans went on confidentially, "Eileen and a group of girls were at our house this afternoon and I heard them call the drug store and ask, 'Do you have Prince Albert in a can?'"

"But don't you realize what that sort of thing can do to children if encouraged?" asked Mrs. Evans.

"That is a mistake. Parents like to hear about the love of your life and those dating dilemmas."

"TELL MOM AND DAD about last night's dance, where you went afterward, and who you were interested in, they are interested because it is you who are doing these things. Dad will probably have some worthwhile advice to offer on the right places to take your girl, places where the bills suits your budget, and the atmosphere suits your age. You will soon appreciate all those good manner hints that mother is always giving you."

So you are the strong silent type, tugged but reserved. Or perhaps you're a cookie with many dates but little discussion about them at home. Teen-timers.

Many are saying that women are responsible for the over two million neurotics disabled from the armed forces, that the overbearing mother is ruining her sons because she doesn't know or understand the proper role in her home. Woman is referred to sadly as the "Lost Sex"; she is supposed to be "thoughtless," a poor helpmate to her husband.

IF WOMAN is supposed to return to her two or three room apartment and root there, she just won't. Not now. It's too late. What must be done is to achieve some realignment of the gains we have made. The error we've made is to believe that freedom means freedom "from" duties and obligations rather than freedom "within" certain limits; freedom implies corresponding duties and certainly from the problems of her children woman has failed in some vital areas.

The career woman is here to stay. All we can do is to Christianize her and make her realize that though she may achieve equal rights with men, she will never be the same as a man. Our Pope has himself recognized that woman has a vital role in today's events. "Your day is here, Catholic women and girls," he says. Woman must be made to realize that her role as intended in the Divine Plan is as man's helpmate and complement to his nature and temperament. We don't have to be mid-victorian again, just middle-of-the-road and commonsense about ourselves.

Teen Talks

Beach Party Dad's Zero Hour Parents Included

By NORMA L. DE'REZ

Suzy, don't forget the hot dogs. Carolyn has taken care of the mustard, relish and pickle department and Katie's mother has whipped up a devil's food cake, that is strictly in the 'out of this world' category.

Norma De'Rez Here come the men of the moment and Willy's wagon is the only 1929 Essex that rattles with such rhythm.

Sounds like it is going to be a wonderful beach party. After you blow a kiss to Mom and Dad, adieu, you are off in a cloud of stardust and song for a dip in the deep and a rendezvous with potato chips, broiled hot dogs and all the sand sprinkled food. Yes, once again you are rolling down the road but this time it is just a little different for you.

The crowd hasn't noticed any change, you are singing just as loud and are a little preoccupied. Perhaps these pensive moments were provoked by the discussion with your parents at the breakfast table this morning, or the talk you had with Dad when the grandfather clock gave you away last night. Mother may have been a little more suitable in her approach when she called you aside in the upstairs hall for a few words that began "Your father and I have been a little worried about you recently."

IT IS ALL a part of growing up - and more important a part of growing older. You begin to realize that curfew crashing, fender fending with the family car and brass rail techniques don't necessarily go with being a teenager. Slowly but certainly you begin to value respect for parental authority. Parents are pretty wonderful people and it is not just a boost in allowance, a new prom dress and the use of the car on Friday nights that makes you feel that way.

One of the best ways to convince them that we think they are good Joes, is by respecting their wishes. When Dad makes midnight the zero hour, don't neglect that date time deadline. It may mean leaving the party a little earlier to get the car home on schedule, but your departure doesn't have to be accompanied by groans and gripes. It won't make your date feel any better if you mumble all the way home about 'destination doghouse'.

So you are the strong silent type, tugged but reserved. Or perhaps you're a cookie with many dates but little discussion about them at home. Teen-timers.

"I heard him say over the phone. 'It's because my breath comes in short pants. You can't fool me, Gloria Evans. I'd know your voice anywhere!'"

"By the time he had hung up and sauntered onto the porch Mrs. Evans had bid us a hasty good-bye."

"I get it," we heard him say over the phone. "It's because my breath comes in short pants. You can't fool me, Gloria Evans. I'd know your voice anywhere!'"
