A Post-Picture Party?

By NORMA DE PREZ

Don't look now, but that weekend it just around the corner. While Susie is spotchecking her new look, and Dick is adding the dapper detail of a shoeshine to his, let's put the emphasis on entertainment. Whether your favorite version of diversion is tennis, touch football, or the movies, it must be one that will keep you mentally, physically and morally in the pink, and financially out of the red. Recreation means a re-creation, a factor for the good. Look up your list of dating activities, can you class them as recreation or wreck-reation?

Norma DePrez

During the summer, movies rate top billing for datetime destinations. The reasons are as evident as a missing muffler on a '26 Ford. Since school dances and sports have been temporarily discontinued until next semester, a good movie show often fills in the blanks in our date book.

We find that the movies provide enjoyment and recreation with little effort or fatigue on our part. They stir our imagination, and as a rule interpretation is not too difficult.

• • •

WHEN THE box office beckons, we have to aware of the no's and woes that accompany an indecent picture. The influence of such movies lowers our moral standard and turns the trend toward perilous temptation. Too many modern movies have made passion the fashion, and pure love, respect for marriage and the family only topics reserved for the Sunday sermon. When Buster Badman shoots one of his hard-boiled henchmen, he turns into a hero. Does glorified crime have any effect on you?

If we are constantly scanning the screen's productions, some of which advocate intolerance, racial or religious prejudices, we are bound to be influenced. Let's stop hiding behind a boogie beat and admit it. We are growing up, and the knowledge that we gain and retain in our formative years influences our behavior and conduct.

Hollywood makes movies with box office appeal. For profit's sake they produce the pictures that "the public wants." Why do lust, love, crime and cruelty monopolize movie marquees today? It is because you and I, who constitute a part of public opinion, lack interest and ingenuity. We have to accept second-rate trash because we never bothered to discriminate or discuss filmdom's output. No, we can't all hop on the bandwagon or soap box and cry, "California, here we come!"; but we can and must do some long-distance campaigning to restore movies to moral and artistic standards.

• • •

IF EACH ONE of us would gather the girls and boys for a post picture party, and discuss the movie we have just seen from the various angles of casting, photographing, costumes, plot, standard of morality and artistry, we would be forming valuable attitudes that would keep low-grade films away from our door. Do we dare to be different, dare to be determined?

Teentimer, although it is often hard to find it there is a sunny side to this matter of movies. Many films exert a good influence on youth today.

Filmdom is providing an informal education by offering various scientific, geographical, historical and economic subjects (and the only homework is a hot fudge sundae at the corner sweet shop). Film biographies of outstanding humanitarians, scientists and composers augment (but do not supplant) laborious "book learning." Some pictures arouse in us noble standards and high ideals of virtue, and it is well that we seek this sort where ever possible.

We can't go wrong when we go to the right movies, but we will never be right if we go to the wrong movies.
