Irish Mission Sisters Star in Movie of Medical Work

Dublin -- (NC) -- An Eire-produced movie, "Visitation," depicting the dramatic story of the Medical Missionaries of Mary, the newest Irish missionary endeavor, received unanimous praise from film critics at its recent premiere at Drogheda County Louth, where the congregation has its motherhouse and conducts a hospital.

Archbishop John D'Alton of Armagh, Primate of All Ireland, and the papal legate and nuncio, the film as one presenting "reality unrelieved by any of the glamor of Hollywood." The film, he said, "unfolds a story of Christian heroism and sacrifice that should make us proud of our faith and our country and of Ireland's missionary achievements."
