Bishops Kearney And Foery Enroute Home From Rome

 They were impressed by the Pontiff's "good health, keenness, kindly charm and Christ-like priestliness."
 Bishop Kearney commented particularly on the Pope's facility in speaking English and putting visitors at their ease. As is well known here, the Pope can carry on conversations in half a dozen European languages, principally German, French, English, Spanish, in addition to his own native Italian.
AFTER HIS OWN audience with the Holy Father, Bishop Kearney presented members of his party to the Pontiff. These included Monsignor Lyons, Father Maney, and two Rochesterians now living in Rome, the Very Reverend Richard K. Burns, vice-rector of the North American College and Seminarian David Murphy (Auburn, N. Y.) who is studying at the North American.
 Other features of Bishop Kearney's visit here were a journey to the Genazzano Shrine outside the city where he offered Mass before the miraculous picture of Our Lady of Good Counsel, and a trip to the famed Vatican mosaic factory where he ordered mosaics for the chapel of the new St. Andrew's Seminary now being constructed in Rochester.
 Accompanied by Monsignor Lyons, Father Maney and this correspondent he also went to the Vatican radio station where he recorded a message which was aired immediately for broadcast this Sunday in Rochester over Station WHAM. A play-back of the Bishop's message here in the Vatican radio station won the approval of all listeners as a good message.
 The Bishop also paid a visit to Joseph P. Walsh, Irish Ambassador to the Holy See and renewed acquaintances with a former classmate at the Catholic University in Washington, Monsignor William Hemmick, now a canon of St. Peter's Basilica.

On Guard

 Jennifer was the ideal actress to bring the story of the little saint to the screen.
 Then came pictures of her visiting the nuns at her old convent school. More pictures of her role of Bernadette.
 Catholic editors, ever suspicious of Hollywood, began to weaken. Maybe, at long last, Hollywood is trying to do something good. By way of encouragement, perhaps Hollywood ought to be given a break. So the Catholic press generally went all out on the advance publicity for the "Song of Bernadette" starring Jennifer Jones. Catholic editors enjoyed the opportunity of using Hollywood pictures and stories about Jennifer. And how we did use them.
THEN CAME THE payoff! Only a few days before "Song of Bernadette" was released for public showing, came a bombshell announcement. Jennifer Jones and her husband were being divorced. And it proved to be true.
 Her subsequent career has only added to the embarrassment of those who had hoped that she might establish a new standard for the movie folks. This week from Paris it was reported that she will marry the producer David Seznick who starred her in his notorious film, "Duel in the Sun".

LOW INCOME HOUSES ASKED country. This is something to which we must constantly keep on calling the attention of the American people. It is one of the great threats to family life in our country."

 He also told the committee that "local authorities have been quite conservative in setting the income levels necessary for admission to the projects as well as the levels necessary for continued occupancy."
HE POINTED out that the ordinary wage-earner in low-income brackets to secure admission to the projects, mentioning for example, that the income level in Chicago is $1,200-a-year, while the lowest income for unskilled wage-earners is around $2,200-a-year. He pointed out, too, that in Cleveland the income level is fixed at $1,900-a-year, while the unskilled wage earners are getting $2,000 or more a year.
 "It should be made clear," the Monsignor declared, "in all our discussions of the bill that public housing should be confined to low-income groups. I want to make it clear that I am absolutely and irrevocably opposed to public housing for middle-income groups."
 The Monsignor said the broadening of citizens' interest in the housing field was one of the most encouraging signs of the times.
 "This interest," he added, "needs to be further stimulated on the local level. We need more and more interest on the part of the Church in housing. It should be one of the important responsibilities of the various churches to stimulate more and more interest in constructive housing programs in their neighborhoods and in their communities."

DESPITE THEIR sorry

experience with Jennifer Jones, Catholic news papers took chances again when the great Ingrid Bergman came along with her delightful role as Sister Benedict in the "Bells of St. Mary's" and her more recent portrayal of St. Joan of Arc.
 But again the same thing happened. With her Joan of Arc picture still in the movie houses, word comes from the island of Stromboli, where Miss Bergman is making a new film, that she has become involved "romantically" with the film's director, Roberto Rossellini.
 Rossellini is married and the father of two sons. Miss Bergman is married to Dr. Peter Lindstrom and the mother of a young daughter. Romance between two people already married is more properly called adultery.
 Shamefully enough, Miss Bergman never issued any denial of her reported intentions of divorcing her husband and marrying Rossellini, as any respectable woman would certainly do. She even admitted to one American newsmen that she was contemplating divorce and remarriage.
 Only after Dr. Lindstrom flew to Italy for a talk with her, and perhaps because RKO press agents were worried by public reaction, did Miss Bergman announce that she would return to her family on completion of her picture.
 We hope she does but it will be a long time before she returns to her former position of public respect.
MEANWHILE, more and more of us in sheer revolt against the disgusting antics of Hollywood characters, are going to confine ourselves to the 16 millimeter home movies of our friends' vacation trip or the next door youngster's birthday party.
