Lutheran Spokesman Asks Aid To Parochial Schools

New York (NC) - A demand that Lutheran parochial schools be included in any social service program for schools was made here by an official of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod. The demand was made by the Rev. Oswald C. J. Hoffmann, director of synod's public relations, while speaking at the dedication of a parochial school attached to St. John's Lutheran Church here.

"WE SHALL NOT stand idly by if our children are denied welfare benefits not connected with our instructional program simply because they attend a Lutheran school," the Lutheran spokesman said. At the same time he pointed out that "even though we are paying our full share of taxes for education, we are not asking for state support of our school systems."

Dr. Hoffmann's demand that social services be extended also to parochial school children in a federal-aid-to-education legislation reiterated the stand taken by another synod official during a congressional hearing on such legislation.
