Catholic Nurses
Hear Role Cited
By Hornell Pastor

Hornell. Presenting an effective picture in the white uniforms of their profession more than 30 members of the Hornell Council of Catholic Nurses received Holy Communion in a body at the 9 a.m. Mass in St. Ann's Church December 11.

Following Mass, members of the newly organized Council, held their first corporate Communion breakfast at the Maple Inn. The Rev. Lawrence Garrison, spiritual director of the Hornell Council, was principal speaker.

Father Garrison cited the nursing profession as one close to Christ and stressed the opportunities for personal sanctification presented in the routine and often tiresome tasks which are a part of the nurses' daily work.

"AT TIMES," he told the nurses, "you will feel that your efforts are unappreciated, but even through that lack of appreciation you may, if your life is dedicated to the service of God and unselfish devotion to your fellow man, gain for yourselves rich spiritual benefits."

Mrs. Joseph Godbout, president of the Hornell Council of Catholic Nurses, presided as toastmistress. At the speakers' table were also Miss Mary Flanagan, Canisteo Central School nurse; secretary; Miss Mary McElroy, treasurer; Mrs. Ivan Biddle and Miss Anne McKeown, directors.

Mrs. Godbout reviewed the activities of the Hornell Council since its organization a month ago, and outlined the program which has been tentatively planned for the coming year.

Among activities planned are a series of lectures on medical ethics, a spiritual retreat and other features of both a spiritual and educational nature. Membership in the Hornell Council, which is open to all Catholic graduate registered nurses in this vicinity, now exceeds 60.

The National Council of Catholic Nurses, of which this council is a part, is a division of the National Catholic Welfare Conference. Nationally the council was organized in June, 1940, to protect, encourage and advance the spiritual, professional and material welfare of members of the nursing profession.
