Kite Contest For Cubs Set By Immaculate Scout Unit
Kite contest day for Cub Scouts of Immaculate Conception Pack 18, Sunday, May 21, will bring out the latest air-borne equipment designed and executed by the cubs themselves.

For two months, the Cub committee has been planning the day, with all seven cub dens working on their kites to produce the one which will fly away with all the honors.

The finished products will represent the results of many nights' work by the youngsters spent cutting paper, sawing thin strips of wood, folding paper over heavy twine and testing for tension strength.

ALTHOUGH the actual work is being done by the cubs, the boys' fathers have put in many nights after work helping their sons fashion a better kite.

Louis Belkitch, cub chairman, and Howard Palmer, cubmaster, are credited with working out this system of father-son cooperation.

After the contest in the afternoon, the cubs will return to the school hall for supper, followed by the regular cub pack meeting at night. Winner of the contest will receive his award for the best kite, then many cubs will receive their badges of advancement. Parents will attend at the close of the evening, cub handicraft will be on display.
