Kindergarten Teachers Taught

Sister M. Consuelo, I.H.M., dean of studies at South Catholic High School, Scranton, Pa., who is teaching speech techniques at a workshop in dramatic art in the summer school added that the recent emphasis on "silent reading" hurt children's reading tastes.

Now the techniques of speech and efficient methods of reading must be taught to bring the youngsters greater pleasure from books, she said.

Although today's children do not read as much as well as they should, "more youngsters like to read" than was common a decade ago the Sisters agreed. Some even admitted that the comic book craze has turned some children to the reading of bigger, better books.
