Electrical Appliances Take Drudgery Out of the Kitchen

People sigh for the good old days but nobody really yearns for the days when there was an old tin sink in the kitchen and a wood box beside the cast iron stove.

The drudgery has been taken out of the kitchen... Antiques are pleasing, correct and sometimes at a premium for every room in the house except the kitchen.

Today's kitchen is the result of the multitude of electric appliances available... Cooking, water heating, room heating and heating Grandmother's flat irons all centered around the big wood or coal burning stove.

Now all of these chores have been virtually eliminated or can be accomplished with finger-tips ease since electric appliances are rapidly reaching the completely automatic stage.

The man who changed the lot of millions of housewives was Elton H. Hughes... ELECTRIC COOKING by heating resistance wire was known to be possible from the earliest days of electricity.

But it took American genius and millions of dollars to put the electric range into production... One hundred and forty nine improvements went into the original Hughes electric range to make it the automatic, pushbutton dream of today.

THE ELECTRIC range, backed by a dishwasher sink with food disposal, refrigerator, home freezer, base and wall cabinets, comprise the modern all electric kitchen of clean, white, matched appliances which make practically every task a simple matter of twisting a dial or touching a button.

Striking example of the time and labor saving devices the granddaughter uses is the appliance which has eliminated the dirtiest job of all washing dishes.

The idea of washing dishes mechanically is not new. As far back as 1860 patents were being filed claiming novel means of doing away with manual dishwashing. However, the first serious undertaking took place in the very early 1900's.

This early machine moved about the floor and housewives objected to the noise. The first dishwasher which remotely resembled those of today was a motor driven device introduced in 1918.

Among Women Seven Promotions Urged

By MARY LENNON SNYDER President, Diocesan Council of Catholic Women

For most of us the vacation season is almost over and we are busy laying plans for the fall and winter activities of our families and our organizations.

IN IMPLEMENTING this program certain activities to which enjoyed considerable growth during the last year and which suggest possibilities for effective programs of actions during the coming year are:

1. The dissemination of Christian principles and ideals regarding marriage and family life and the counteracting of the false ideology of the day in these fields.

2. The reintroduction of religious practices into the home.

3. The development of a program of recreational and social interests on the home scene.

4. The elimination of social and economic evils that are harmful to the family.

5. The promotion of a program of parent education or child care within the home.

6. The encouragement of marriage preparation courses suited both to teen-agers and to engaged couples.

7. The promotion of activities of an inspirational nature in the family field.

WHAT'S DOING AT THE DALY'S

It was a new and different Pat who came down to breakfast last Monday. No blue jeans, sport shirt and slippers.

At five that afternoon Pat was home again—a weary, rumpled Pat. Tossing hat, gloves and the beat-up roll of drawings onto the couch, she kicked off the high heels and slumped into an easy chair.

She laid hat, gloves and purse on the hall table and came into the breakfast alcove.

Instinctively the Head of the House half rose from his seat. "Date this early in the morning?"

Chapel in Alps Paris (INC)—A group of 60 young men from the Paris area are spending their summer vacations building a chapel in the French Alps near Chamoni.

No. 3506 is cut in waist sizes 24-34. Size 28, with pockets, 2 1/2 yds. 35 in., with flaps, 1 1/2 yds. 54 in.

Stick to the brushes and pencil, the Head of the House advised. "I'm no personnel director but it seems to me you're applying in the wrong place. Let's analyze the thing: you're sold on art but the value to the human spirit. You love people, especially children. Ever think of teaching—teaching art?"

"I'd love it," Pat sighed. "But this is where we came in—no experience. Teachers are supposed to have taught before they can teach. Isn't that the way it goes?"

"Doesn't every teacher have to teach her first day somewhere?" Mary, our logical one, contributed.

NEXT day Pat went out again: hat, gloves, stockings and all. By noon she was back.

"I think this is it," she said, "but let's say a prayer."

After a few more conferences both hours and terms were arranged and a contract signed.

"No cashing, no typing," Pat sighed. "Working with children and art all at the same time—and getting paid for it!"
