AMONG WOMEN
A Resolution Modeled

By MARY LENNON SNYDER

Last week in this column we laid down briefly a few basic rules for the drawing up of a set of resolutions. This week it might be helpful to show a model set of resolutions such as a parish organization secretary might be called upon to write.

Let us suppose that a local theater is advertising as a coming attraction a moving picture which has been declared an objectionable by the Legion of Decency. If the members vote to protest formally, a set of resolutions such as the following might be drawn up:

WHEREAS, we have learned that the motion picture "The Outlaw" is to be shown during the week of April 16 at the Bijou Theater; and

WHEREAS, this motion picture has been declared objectionable by the Legion of Decency; and

WHEREAS, we are pledged as members of the Legion of Decency to fight the showing of immoral and amoral pictures;

BE IT RESOLVED, that this organization go on record as disapproving of the exhibition of this picture; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we notify the management of the Bijou Theater of our intention of not patronizing this picture, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that unless this picture is withdrawn we pledge ourselves not to attend any further motion picture exhibitions at this theater.

Hot Liver Sausage
Prepare a quick hot main dish with ready-to-serve liver sausage. Have the meat sliced about 1/4 inch thick. Place the slices on your broiler rack, brush with melted fat, then insert the rack so that the top of the meat is 2 inches from the heat. Brown on one side, turn and brown on the other side. This will take only about 5 minutes.

WHAT'S DOING AT THE DALYS'
New Twist To Old Chore

By MARY TINLEY DALY

Busy mothers are always looking for shortcuts: you cut biscuits square to avoid rolling them out and re-rolling the scraps; you boil twice the number of potatoes needed one day and serve the rest creamed or fried the next; you have a basket at the foot of the stairs to gather up the stuff-left-downstairs in one full swoop; you use a tray to clear the table quickly...

Nothing new in any of this—just familiar—old tricks. Maybe this is an old one too, but it was new to me.

It all started when Susie Magner's mother bought her a little loom to make woven squares and Mary fell in love with the thing. So I went to the art needlework department and bought one for Mary.

"So nice for little fingers to keep busy," smiled the sentimental little old lady over the counter.

And out of mischief... Why didn't you buy me one?" Markie asked as Mary and Susie settled to work to make pot-holders. It did look like fun, yet reminiscent of a sadly neglected chore... If only I could sell the idea...

"THERE'S something else that's just as much fun, Markie," I said enthusiastically. "And that will give you something besides pot-holders for the kitchen."

"A woven bedspread for my bed?"

"Not exactly," I hesitated. "But it will give you a whole drawer full of wearable white socks."

Markie was beginning to smell a rat. "You mean darning?"

"You might call it that," I began, then warmed to the subject—for after all the stake was pretty high. "What it really is is weaving. You weave in the heel of a sock just as the girls are weaving their squares."

"Here, let me show you." Quickly I grabbed a pair of sock out of the basket both heels out. I slipped the darning egg into the heel of a sock, started making the long warp threads.

Markie eyed the procedure suspiciously but Mary became interested.

"We do that too," she said. "Before we start weaving the other way."

"And then you weave it this way."

Pamphlet Printed By Catholic Light

Scranton—(NC)—"If a woman knows what a woman wants" then a new pamphlet published by the Catholic Light ought to be effective in helping to fight birth control.

The pamphlet, "Letter to An Unborn Child and His Reply," first appeared as a Spotlight column in The Catholic Light, Scranton Diocesan newspaper. Its author is the Rev. Thomas J. Cawley, editor of the paper.

When she read the pamphlet a reader far from Scranton, Mrs. Peggy Wink of Northport, Long Island, wrote:

"I BEG you to have it reprinted in pamphlet or leaflet form and have it sold all over the Nation. I'd personally give quantities to take with me whenever I give a talk (as I sometimes do) on marriage. I'd distribute them."

"The point you stress is the one that matters most to me—that these children would never know eternal life if we did not give them temporal life. And eternal life is worth any price we have to pay for it here on earth. Heaven is beyond pricing."

So the Catholic Light had the pamphlet published and is distributing it through Catholic women's organizations.
