

Rochester Health Officer Lauds Hornell Hospital

Hornell—Tribute to St. James Mercy Hospital, with its new wing, and to all who had a part in erecting the addition was paid at a dinner attended by 87 representatives of state, regional and local hospital boards and firms actively connected with the new wing's construction.

Principal commendation came from Dr. Albert D. Wilson, Rochester city health officer, who declared that the hospital is as fine as any in the country.

Attorney Joseph R. Cullen, toastmaster, explained that the dinner was held "to extend thanks to those who have assisted in building the hospital."

"You can buy a home all built," the health officer said, "but to build a hospital somebody must have a dream. Many have to work to raise the necessary funds. Money raising is important, but above all, you must have the will to build a good hospital."

"THE SPIRIT of friendly co-operation so evident in Hornell will lead this institution to a position of eminence in the hospital field."

William L. Collins, vice president of St. James Mercy Hospital Board of Managers, paid tribute to Sister M. Aquinas, superintendent, and Dr. O. K. Stewart, president of the board.

"The two persons," Mr. Collins said, "have used the medical profession, not as a means to live, but to serve the community. Gratitude for the Sisters of Mercy and for Dr. Stewart is in the heart of everyone who realizes that they have lived for this hospital."

Dr. Stewart responded briefly by expressing hope that the "friendly spirit among the Sisters, doctors, nurses and personnel and the trustees" would continue.

SISTER AQUINAS was greeted with sustained applause as she stood to acknowledge Mr. Collins' remarks. She said, simply, "Thank you—I could have done nothing without you."

Mr. Collins paid tribute to John Mellinger, chair of the fund-raising drive; St.orney Sherman Shultz, J. Baker, William G. ... and Mrs. Francis Carron, of the Women's Board, who were division chairmen in the campaign.

DR. GEORGE TAYLOR, president of St. James Mercy Hospital medical staff, said, "This is our workshop. We accept the responsibility to give Hornell as good medical service as can be given in the United States."

The hospital building committee was praised by Leo Waasdorp of the Rochester architectural firm of Waasdorp and Northrup.

Maurice A. Rowley of Swartout and Rowley, general contractors, said, "All the wonderful comments about this building would not, have been true if it were not for your cooperation."

Miss Anne McKevitt, superintendent of nurses, was commended by several of the speakers for "her competent and cheerful handling of the mass of details" involved in a building program.

Grace was said by the Rev. Lawrence W. Gannon, pastor of St. Ann's Church.

Student nurses served the dinner.

22 Months From Ground Breaking

THE BEGINNING of construction of the new wing for St. James Mercy Hospital in Hornell took place on Oct. 5, 1949 when ground was broken. Sister M. DeSales lifts first shovel of dirt as Sister M. Aquinas, hospital superintendent looks on approvingly. Between the two Sisters of Mercy is Dr. O. K. Stewart, Hospital Board president. At left is Charles Northrop of the Rochester architectural firm Waasdorp and Northrup, and Maurice A. Rowley of Swartout and Rowley, Rochester general contractors. (Evening Tribune Photo).

Miss McKevitt's Aid In Building Hospital Lauded

By DOLORES HANRAHAN
(The Evening Tribune)

Ever since construction of St. James Mercy Hospital's new million dollar wing was started, Miss Anne McKevitt's office has been as busy as Times Square.

A half hour in the office of the director of the School of Nursing may be bewildering, but it certainly isn't dull. On the average of every three minutes the telephone rings. Workmen appear with persistent regularity to ask which equipment goes where.

Staff members drop in for advice, reassurance or both.

Miss McKevitt emerges from the maze unbothered and unbowled. "Our family has always been healthy," she confides.

THE VIGOROUS Miss McKevitt was appointed director of St. James Mercy Hospital School of Nursing in 1940. Three years later the school became fully accredited under the New York State Department of Education.

Since coming to Hornell, Miss McKevitt has supervised the training of 121 graduates. She has consistently required a high professional standard from students and graduates.

When asked what qualifications she considers most valuable in a nurse she replied:

"HONESTY, dependability and trustworthiness are essential to any profession, particularly nursing. With all these desirable character traits a nurse cannot be 100 percent successful unless she has that extra something call it warmth, charm or personality."

Miss McKevitt was graduated from Waterloo High School and received her nursing diploma from St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester in 1929. She did graduate work at Columbia University, the University of Rochester and St. Louis University.

She was nursing arts instructor at St. Mary's Hospital and Providence Hospital, Detroit, Mich., before her Hornell appointment.

Sister Aquinas Career At Hospital Covers 46 Years

Hornell—Sister Mary Aquinas, in 46 years, has participated in St. James Mercy Hospital's growth from 15 beds to its present 145.

In 1905, directly after being received into the Sisters of Mercy, the young nun began her nursing career at St. James. It was climaxed, in 1934, by her appointment as hospital superintendent.

Mother Mary Teresa, Sisters M. Aid DeSales and M. Celestine were at the hospital when she arrived. Within a short time the hospital's capacity was increased to a 30-patient maximum. The five sisters often worked day and night.

"No modern appliances simplified the routine work of hospital housekeeping," Sister Aquinas says. Back-breaking tasks, long hours on duty and strict self-discipline apparently did not dull the young nun's love of nursing.

FOR THE FIRST few years Sister Aquinas was on general duty.

In 1909, Sister Aquinas was assigned to the maternity ward which then was housed in the Maternity Cottage built in 1905 by the Women's Board. She headed the maternity department for 25 years.

In 1934 Sister M. Aid resigned as superintendent of St. James because of ill health. Sister Aquinas as was appointed her successor.

DURING HER 17 years as head of the hospital she has been responsible for numerous improvements in nursing techniques and elevation of professional standards.

"Running a busy hospital leaves little time for settling comfortably in a rut," Sister Aquinas says. New medicines, modern techniques in surgery and patient care make constant alertness essential.

And always, in a superintendent's mind, she believes, must be a plan of action in the event of emergency such as epidemics. Sister Aquinas remembers two which demanded resourcefulness as well as physical strength.

In 1918, Hornell, along with the rest of the nation, was struck with the worst epidemic in Sister Aquinas' experience. "Influenza patients poured into the hospital until every possible space was utilized," she recalls. "Beds were set up in the halls, in store rooms, on porches, and even in closets."

She and the other nuns and nurses worked day and night. Flu depleted the regular staff so 24-hour duty was more than common.

THE POLIO OUTBREAK in 1944, while not so widespread, required special consideration on the part of the hospital staff. A portion of the second floor was converted into an isolation ward. More than 150 polio patients in this area were admitted during the Summer.

Along with actual supervision of patients' care, Sister Aquinas has directed the full-time business of managing a hospital.

Her actions belie her own expression that she is "a little tired." Long before actual construction of the new wing was started in 1949, Sister Aquinas was pouring over plans, financial arrangements and the maze of details which accompanies large-scale building.

"I could not have done it," she says, "without the competent assistance of Miss Anne McKevitt, superintendent of nurses, the affiliated boards—and the wonderful people in Hornell."

Five members of Waverly Knights of Columbus, Council 251, were presented with life memberships and eight received honorary life memberships at a meeting July 10 in the Albertson building.

Frank Rhode of Elmira, district deputy, presented life membership awards to Richard Vall, Hugh Macdonald, James Corcoran, George Brougham and John J. Hurley.

He also presented the honorary life awards to Edward Snell, Robert Rumble, John J. Hughes, Thomas Jordan, Edward Sullivan, James Guinane, Dr. Leon Belowski and Daniel P. McCarthy.

Joseph Nunan, Grand Knight, presided at the meeting which marked the beginning of his third term in office.

'Showboat' To Open
On Corning Stage
Corning The stage version of 'Showboat', the world's most musical comedy, will not be seen for ten years after this season. Official reports from New York and Chicago state that the stage presentation of 'Showboat' will be withdrawn this year, and not permitted to be performed for the next ten years.
The last chance to see 'Showboat' on stage in this area will be the Corning Summer Theatre's presentation. The Theatre's fourth great week in the Corning Glass Center presents a fine, ambitious production of this great entertainment piece. Stewart Ballinger as 'Rayford Raveland', Betty Colby as Magnolia Marion Selles as Julie, Alex Alexander as Captain Andy, LeVerne Hutchinson as Joe, are some of the fine New York Company assembled for this offering.
Music will be provided by the Summer Theatre Orchestra which comprises eight pieces. The largest Summer Theatre audience on record saw last week's presentation starring Judy Holliday. It is anticipated that 'Showboat' will be the finest musical offering in this area for many years to come.
