Budenz Talks To Verein Members

Christian principles must be the foundation of any sincere fight against Communism. Louis F. Budenz, Fordham University professor and former Communist managing editor of The Daily Worker, said at Pittsburgh, according to Religious News Service.

He spoke at a joint session of the conventions of the Catholic Central Verein of America and the National Catholic Women's Union. The meeting was presided by a Solemn Pontifical Mass at St. Paul's cathedral celebrated by Bishop F. Dearden of Pittsburgh.

DECLARING THAT "secularism's wide acceptance in this country has blinded many to the true nature of atheistic Communism," Mr. Budenz said the basis for any effective work against Communism must be through "the dissemination of Christian principles throughout our society."

Mr. Budenz called on the more than 400 delegates attending the conventions to continue the fight against Communism by a campaign of prayer and penance. Started in 1935 by Catholic men of German origin, the Central Verein carries on philanthropic and social activities. The national Catholic Women's Union, a companion group, is now in its 35th year.

Prelate Upholds Absolutes At Catholic Verein Meet

In response to a statement by the Chief Justice of the United States that "all concepts are relative," a leading American churchman declared to the Catholic Central Verein convention in Pittsburgh that without a code of absolute principles of right and wrong "neither peace nor prosperity can be assured for our nation or for other nations."

Archbishop Aloisius J. Muench, Papal Nuncio to Germany and Bishop of Fargo, N. D., in a message from across the Atlantic, said "there must be absolute norms so long as man is what he is, a child of the Creator, endowed by Him with inalienable rights, and invested by Him with precious freedoms." Without absolutes, the Archbishop maintained, "the very basis of democracy is destroyed, resting as it does on the principle of equal rights before the law."

"Less than two months ago," Archbishop Muench recalled, "the American public was shocked to hear the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court (Fred M. Vinson) declare that nothing is more certain in modern society than the principle that there are no absolutes, that a name, a phrase, a standard has meaning only associated with the considerations which give birth to the nomenclature. To those who would paralyze our Government in the face of impending threat by encasing it in a semantic straightjacket we must reply that all concepts are relative."

"ARE THESE dangerous tenets?" Archbishop Muench went on. "Look into the world of today, the world of new dictators who trample under foot the rights of men, harkle their freedom in chains of slavery, show no regard for human life, and light fires of war wherever it may suit their wicked purposes."

"Against these aggressors blood is being spilled on battlefields, in defense of what men have never held to be absolutes in democracy: their basic rights and freedoms."
