Mr Houston contended that Mr Sholes "has no standing to raise the question which he at tempts to raise" and has failed to show that "he has no other appropriate remedy "

THERE IS no evidence in Mr Sholes' petition that he ever asked the university's board of regents to take any action on the religious question, Mr Houston added.

After Mr Sholes objected to the university's motion to quash his writ. Judge Larson said that he felt the lawver had not substantiated any claim that a constitutional right was being violated by the university
