Pope Pius Alerts Parents On Sex Literature Menace

Marching to the 50-yard "Mason-Dixon line" will be an Aquinas squad which, in the tradition of Coach Connelly, will be well-drilled and finely-conditioned—ready to give the Rochester area the kind of "big time" football which has made the Rochester Catholic high school, conducted by the Basilian Fathers, known throughout the nation.

Diocese Launches Convert Campaign

San Diego, Calif. (NC) — An intensive five-part campaign for converts has been launched by Bishop Charles F. Budde of San Diego. The essential portions of the drive will consist of five weeks' prayerful preparation, clerical conferences to study execution of plans, publicity formation of committees and finally the actual drive for converts itself. Public novenas and special prayers for the campaign's success feature the spiritual preparation, ending November 1. Publicity for the drive will include essay contests, debates and discussions in diocesan high schools, distribution of handbills and invitations to Mass to non-Catholics, advertisements in the daily press and days of recollection and retreats. The actual campaign for converts will open November 1 and continue throughout the month.

"LET US concede that these authors remain from the purely theoretical point of view within the limits of Catholic morality. It is no less true that their manner of presenting sexual life is of such a nature as to give it in the mind of the average reader and in his practical judgment the meaning and value of an end in itself."
"It causes readers to lose sight of the true primordial purpose of marriage which is the procreation and education of children and it causes readers also to lose sight of the grave duties that married people have toward this purpose which the writings of which we are speaking leave too much in the shade."
The Pope insisted that modern parents have a great responsibility in determining the line between wholesome sex instruction and literature which exploits the lowest instincts. This literature, he said, "menaces the Christian people with a double scourge."
"In the first place it enormously exaggerates the importance and the scope of the sexual element in life."
"IN THE second place it

ND Game To Make TV History

Pittsburgh (NC) — Notre Dame University's "Fighting Irish" will help make television history when they play the University of Southern California December 1 at Los Angeles. It will be the first time East and Midwest fans ever will have been able to see a West Coast football game on their TV screens. Westinghouse Electric Corporation here announced it will sponsor the intercollegiate game. The National Broadcasting Co. TV network will carry the broadcast.

Bar Group Approves Catholic Law School

Newark, N. J. (NC) — Seton Hall University's school of law here has been placed on the list of approved law schools by a vote of the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association. As customary, approval is provisional for three years, subject to annual inspection, and at the end of this period the school may be accorded final approval. Seton Hall law school, which was opened February 5 of this year offers a three-year program of morning classes or a four-year program of evening classes for a bachelor of law degree. A college degree is required for admission. Dr. Miriam Theresa Rooney is dean of studies and the Rev. Thomas M. Reardon is regent of the university.

Joseph Scott, Noted Catholic Attorney, Once 25c-An Hour Hod Carrier

Los Angeles (NC) — When Joseph Scott, 84-year-old attorney and Catholic layman of Los Angeles, got his first job in America in 1888 as a 25-cent-an-hour hod carrier he was given some advice that he has never forgotten. Young Scott was getting dizzy going up the ladder with his load of bricks, when an Irish bricklayer turned to him and said:

JOSEPH SCOTT

"YOU GET DIZZY when you look down. Always look up. No one ever gets dizzy looking up." The veteran attorney, who has fought against atheistic communism for more than half a century, related the story this week to Virgil Pinkley, editor and publisher of The Los Angeles Mirror. The column follows. "What appals me and has me profoundly disturbed has been the inroads of un-American ideas and a Godless philosophy among the so-called intelligent groups of our people."
This was Joseph Scott, our standing in the leader and American patriot, speaking earnestly and as in a prayer before the Los Angeles Lions Club yesterday. He continued:
"The university professors my professional associates, even in the judicial profession, you find manifest evidences of the agnostic conception of life almost a cynical disregard for the great story of Christianity."
DEALING WITH communism
Scott says:
"The communist in per se is essence an atheist. When he dies there is no immortality. He just goes to the gutter. The Jew has to forget the Ten Commandments, the prophecies of Isaiah, the Psalms of David and the Lamentations of Jeremiah. The Christians must sneer at Bethlehem and laugh at Calvary, and the Sermon on the Mount is just a piece of musical literature devoid of all sentiment of faith in the supernatural life and the comforts of a belief in our home eternal in the skies. They have the cold, heartless, destructive philosophy that there is no law of God."
To find out more about this 84-year-old warrior I went along to his office for several hours. It is a stimulating experience. Entering the reception room one sees many copies of the Constitution, the Declaration of Independence, Abraham Lincoln and the Gettysburg Address, and photographs of its members and high-ranking officers. Scott's desk is a simple wooden sign of the cross. Base Ball and Connie Mack.
"YOUR HOST HAS a fine head of white hair, thick and bushy eyebrows and sparkling eyes. He is in good health and a strong handshake. His conversation is punctuated by well-considered stories, newspaper photographs, images and a flowing and passionate style. For his mother dean. Always look up. No one ever gets dizzy looking up."

Five months on the construction job merited a position teaching rhetoric and English rhetoric and English literature at St. Bonaventure's College, Allegheny, N. Y. Many of his students were older and larger than himself. During his first class he had to physically manhandle the largest student to hold his seat. His starting salary was $300 a year, plus room and board.

FOUR YEARS later when he headed for Los Angeles in 1893. Six years ago his salary had been increased to $300 a year. An analysis of the people of Los Angeles at that time, 60,000 people, is equal to the San Francisco population at present. The price of land in Los Angeles had less than 100 people fewer than Pasadena today.
Asked the biggest changes he noticed in Los Angeles and the Southwest during the last half century, Scott did not mention our growth and size, nor of the lack of rapid transit. He replied:
"It is our loss of faith. We are still full of materialism. Money and power have become paramount ideas. Hard work, thrift and ambition and faith in government are gone. They had individual confidence and they were seeking opportunities and personal freedom."
"We are full of the eight outstanding men of the 1880-1920 era came here at the end of one of the great periods of the Jews. Several arrived on stretchers. But they had faith. They became well and lived to serve useful and constructive lives."
Returning to his mother and Ireland, Scott revealed how Irish men who fought in our Civil War came back to the Old Country to tell about Abraham Lincoln and his Gettysburg Address.
"MY MOTHER used to say, 'Son, go to America. It is there that government of the people is developing. Always remember what Lincoln said: Always keep close to the people, Joseph.'"
With eloquence Scott relates that his mother used to say when a child was asleep or smiling, "The angels are whispering in that baby's ear."
And at night she sang the following song to him in his cradle or when he knelt in prayer:
To the west, to the west, to the land of the free,
Where the mighty Missouri runs
Where a man is a man if he is willing to die,
And the humblest may gather fruit of the soil,
Where children are blessings and he who has most
Has a lot to be thankful for,
Where the young man's soul and the aged man's heart
Are joined together in the love of God.
