WHAT SUCH people are doing when their pasters administer the annual Legion of Decemey pledge in the churches is hard to imagine. They evidently aren't listening; much less sincerely repeating the terms of the pledge. For they often ask, "who are the members of the Legion of

They'd given Theatre, a group whose basic the movie a good feeling which they hoped might incidentally encourage the practice of brotherly love, but they knew they'd ig-

NOW CHARLES Schnee has developed an original story idea Robert Buckner and again MGM has produced it with Clarence Brown, who just directed 'Angels in the Outfield." It's a comedy called "When in Rome" and the story runs like

A young American priest (played by Van Johnson) goes on the Holy Year Pilgrimage to Rome. On the boat is a crook running away from the law. He's played by Paul Douglas.

When the boat docks at Genoa he crook sees police waiting on the dock so he steale the priest's clothes and makes his get-away. The priest is arrested but soon clears himself. The crook, meanpriest eventually catches up with him Before that, however, he has some amusing adventures, a lew less funny ones too

This idea of simulation proved a tricky one It's risky business to show a layman posing as a priest because there's not much he can do without barging into the sacrilegious.

DON'T TAKE this as a review of the film because as yet nobody has seen it Schnes tells me however, that with the help of various priests, here and in Rome where the film was made. the studio people managed to avoid any situations in which the crook, while posing as a priest, pretended to administer the Sacraments It will be interesting to see how they got him out of attempting to say Mass. He almost got into trouble one day. While he was visiting St. John Lateran with a party of pilgrims, a woman begged him to hear her confession. He squirmed stammered and went red in the face. Then on a flash of inspiration he cupped his hands and shouted "Father O'Leary" whereupon priests came hurrying from all sides! He waved the woman towards them, made a quick exit and the situation was saved.

"At least when you see this film," says Charles Schnee, you'll have no doubt what particular religion we're talking about "

Most of it was shot in Rome and shows St. Peters. St. John Lateran, parts of the Vatican and the Colesseum where the crook finally makes an act of contrition and returns to the
