Railroader's Hobby Turns Out Religious Needlework

By FAWN SCHEFFEL

A railroad employee has a hobby not generally associated with men but one that may pay off in Christmas gifts for his customers and friends.

FRANK S. BURTON, an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company sits before his punchneedle embroidery conception of "The Last Supper." He has been following this work as a hobby for 37 years.

Working on a picture of the Last Supper, Mr. Burton explained that he'd first become interested in needlework 37 years ago through the enthusiasm of his sister.

Working from outline designs, ordered especially from a firm in New York City, the railroad man uses an intricate needle-like gadget which makes tiny knots of pearl cotton on the silk base.

MANY HOURS of labor go into the pictures and he said that a picture like the one he was working on represented a total of 117 hours labor.

ANOTHER PIECE of wood carving executed by his father is a chain connecting the emblems symbolic of the four degrees in the Knights of Columbus.
