A Dedication

It pleases me to announce the completion of the JOHN M. HEDGES Funeral Home. My primary aim in building such a modern and beautiful Funeral Home was to establish a fitting Memorial to the memory of my father (1887-1942) and so carry on the finest of traditions established by him. These traditions are: the tradition of an understanding friend who assumes responsibility for every detail at a time when such friendship and understanding are so necessary; the tradition of trust and confidence, of true personal interest in every respect—including an appreciation of the financial concern of every family. It is to these principles that the JOHN M. HEDGES Funeral Home is dedicated.

HERE in the beautiful new JOHN M. HEDGES Funeral Home, your every need has been carefully considered. Large parlors, luxuriously carpeted, with adjoining sitting rooms afford complete ease and privacy. A smoking room is provided, and of course rest rooms for men and women. Your comfort is further assured by modern air conditioning throughout. Adequate parking space is provided on the property. The lovely landscaped grounds and stately shade trees lend an air of quiet grace to the setting. To insure the finest in Funeral Service, John M. Hedges has taken particular care in selecting equipment and furnishings designed for your comfort and convenience.

Originally founded in 1912 by JOHN M. "Jack" HEDGES and Frank Hoffman at Main and Scio, the HEDGES & HOFFMAN FUNERAL HOME, later moved to 141 Scio St. . . its location at the present time. For 39 years HEDGES & HOFFMAN has earned an enviable reputation for confidence and trust, inspired by the dignity, sympathy and understanding which they offered to the many families they served from every section of Rochester and vicinity. These same principles which guided the Founder will be the inspiration for his Son, John M. Hedges, and his associate since 1921, James E. McDermott.
