WHAT'S DOING AT THE DALYS'

Better Dead Than Different BY MARY TINLEY DALY

Glany saved her surprise until dinner time. After grace, size produced a small cotton-filled jewelry box, opened it and isid it proudly in the middle of the table.

"That's it is she shouted triumphantly.

"Ugh!" Ellem made a face, picked up "The Thing" in its box and set it on the serving table. "A dead toolhat the din-before you got to Blessed art

table for thou it was out!" frig for," Glany defended her-Ginny's blue eyes were wide with surprise. "You weren't there." "I throught you'd the glad." "We are glad," the Headeof the House said. "We're gind it's out after watching, it wave in the since before you were born, Mary explained. "And tonight breeze for a week. But yo'd you'll put it under your pillow rather see you smile now." and in the morning you'll find Ginny obliged. "Mommy took it out," she explained. "And to afteen conts.

you know what she did? She took a hanky and she wet it... "And then she wrang it out,"

"And I got another'n loose. Vanna see it wiggle?" Ginny desponstrated. Fat took up the tale, "and she got a good grip and told you to say a 'Hail Mary' to yourself and gaşe, Ginny," Elleen grim-

"Not at the table." But tinny was not to be diver-ted. This was her moment. "After the big ones come in, do you ever use 'em and collect

"The trick it anot to lose 'em."
the Head of the House said. "If you do you'll have to get false ones—and you'll pay for them."
Ginny went on with her dinner and the conversation went on to

"HOW'D YOU KNOW?"

"She's been pulling 'em out

"inflation," Johnny commented.

"They were only a nickel in our other subjects. "I'm not going to put t under my pillow," Clinny annunced, picking up the box with the beloved tooth. "I'm going to loved tooth. "I'm going to beep om all-and then when I need false ones I'll get Dr. Hunt make a set from these." Talk about lorg-range plan

THAT NIGHT, at bath time. Ginny grew very confidential. she sighed, "am I ever glad it came out! And maybe you can pull this wiggly one tomorrow. That'll mean two out -and the best one in the class-room's only got three . . . "That's Martha, isn't it?" we asked. For weeks now we have been kept advised on first grade dontal statistics. Jimmle, it seems, lost two teeth even before he went into first grade-and Emily's new teeth are 'way up flight ... "Well, I couldn't 'spect to catch up to Martha," Clinny said, climbing into pajamas. "You don't have to be the heat-but it's sure awful to be the worst. And 'till today I didn't even have one out. New I can smile like the rest of the kids."

There was the wide one-toothmissing smile as Ginny said prayers, climbed into bed and settled down contentedly. On he dresser was the jewelry box with the fone tooth—the symbol Util made her as good as her felle

TO STUDY MEDICINE IN U.S.

Agnes Osel-Roundy, left, has just arrived from Kumasi, Coast, West Africa, to study at St. Mary's College, Notre Jame, Indiana, Taking preznedical courses at St. Mary's, she plans to become a doctor and return to Afgica to work among he people. After she finished her studies under the Holy Child Cape Coast, about 200 miles from her home, a priest friend of her parents arranged for her to come to the U. Seller arrival here was delayed several months by visa difficulties. She is shown above being interviewed by two St. Maria students for the college newspaper. (NC Photis)
