Opens New Pathological Laboratory In Elmira

be recovered for identification. Bacteria causing whooping cough, diphtheria and most infections are cultured in this manner.

Some bacteria, causing blood stream infections and other internal infections due to a strain of streptococcus are even more fastidious to isolate and must not only be incubated at body temperature but must also be placed in an atmosphere with no oxygen.

TO OBTAIN THESE conditions the hospital has purchased for the Bacteriology Laboratory a new Spaulding-Weiss apparatus. The oxygen in these cultures is replaced with hydrogen to induce these bacteria to grow. When the organism has been identified by the bacteriologist it can be tested for its susceptibility to antibiotics. Then a report is made to the doctor as to the organism causing the disease and which drug will best kill the organism. With these new methods, most reports are ready in twenty-four hours rather than three or four days formerly required for bacteriology reports.

The tour continues with a visit to the electrocardiograph and metabolism room. Here, equipment is kept for taking these tests. The electrocardiograph test or "EKG" as it is usually called is used in helping to establish a diagnosis in heart disease.

Electrodes are connected to the patient's wrists and ankles and tracings of the heart beat are made. The evaluation of this test by a doctor especially trained in this work often appreciably aids the attending physician in outlining treatment and prescribing medication.

The basal metabolism is done to determine how much oxygen the body uses when fasting and at complete rest. It is often ordered for patients whose symptoms suggest an over-active thyroid gland. Both the electrocardiograph and metabolism apparatus are portable and are done as bedside tests on hospital patients but when ordered for out-patients are done in the department.

Finally, the visitor is shown the pathologist's office, and if there greeted by a genial, soft-spoken doctor who is the head of the department. He is Dr. James Mitchell, who came to St. Joseph's as resident Pathologist March 1, 1932.

Dr. Mitchell was assistant Pathologist at King's County Hospital, Brooklyn, New York, from 1930 to 1931. He is a Diplomat of the American Board of Clinical Pathologists. Other professional organizations of which Dr. Mitchell is a member include the New York State Pathological Society and the Association of Public Health Laboratories of the State of New York.

The personnel of the laboratory in addition to Dr. Mitchell includes one Sister registered medical technologist, three lay registered medical technologists, one bacteriologist, two student technologists, a full-time secretary, and a housekeeping personnel.

British Chaplains Study 'Leakage'

London (AP)—Chaplains of the British armed forces told a meeting of clergy here that only one in five Catholic boys drafted into the armed services could be described as a fully practicing member of the Church.

Other priests, who met in a two-day conference to discuss the serious problem of "leakage," reported that the number of boys lapsing from their religion after leaving school was even higher in some areas.

Ignorance of the Faith and the bad example of lax parents were blamed as main causes of the trouble. Priests were urged to advise young married couples on the necessity of giving their children the right training at home and at school where, it was felt, the background for an individual's future attitude was implanted.

Missioner Dies, Victim Of Cruelty

Montreal (AP)—The Rev. Joseph Leon Arcand, Canadian Franciscan missionary, died 10 minutes before taken to a Franciscan mission hospital in Chefoo, China, according to advices now received here. His death had stirred indignation protests from Canadian government officials who charged it resulted from neglect or maltreatment by Chinese communists.

He was imprisoned for six months and on February 8, according to advices received here by Franciscans, was taken from his cell, dragged through the streets, flanked by crowds and subjected to other tortures. As the result of blows from the crowd, the advices stated, Father Arcand fell unconscious in the street. He was being taken to the hospital when he died without regaining consciousness, the reports said.

Church Radio Stations Approved

Washington, D. C. (AP)—The Federal Communications Commission ruled here that there is no constitutional objection to the government granting a license to a church or religious group to operate a radio station.

The Federal Communications Act bars the granting of a station license to "any company, corporation, or association of which any officer or director is an alien, or of which more than one-fifth of the capital stock may be voted by aliens or their representatives," or by any association organized under the laws of a foreign country.

In its ruling, the commission said that a church is an "association" within the meaning of this Act.
