2 Diocesan Priests Interview Madrid Institute Founder

FOUNDER OF Pope Leo XIII Social Institute in Madrid, Spain, Bishop Angel Herrera of Malaga (center) is being interviewed by Monsignor Donald M. Cleary of Cornell University, (right) and Rev. Richard T. Torney, Mercy Sisters' chaplain (left). The Rochester diocese priests conferred with the Bishop on progress of the Institute training priests in application of the Papal Social Encyclicals in Spain.

A Spanish Bishop termed "a one man movement in Spain" by a Times-Life correspondent has promised faithfully to visit Rochester and also Cornell University when he comes to this country in 1953.

The promise was made by Bishop Angel Herrera of Malaga, director of Madrid's Leo XIII Social Institute, to the Very Rev. Msgr. Donald M. Cleary, Catholic chaplain of Cornell University, and the Rev. Richard T. Torney, chaplain of Our Lady of Mercy High School.

The two Rochester clergymen visited with the noted Spanish prelate and presented him with the July issue of "The Sign," national Catholic magazine in which the work of Bishop Herrera and his background are featured in an article by Peter Jerome.

DESCRIBED BY Monsignor Cleary in special correspondence to the Courier Journal as "without a doubt the most progressive Bishop in Spain," Bishop Herrera is a former newspaper man and publisher after having been a successful lawyer in Madrid. He was ordained in 1940 and consecrated Bishop of Malaga in 1947 following an outstanding career as Catholic lay apostolate.

Training in the Institute are 120 Spanish priests, one American from Louisiana University, four French and several South Americans. The courses include a two year one for priests going in to parish work and a four year course leading to a degree in political science of priests who expect to make a career of teaching or writing.

Bishop Herrera's ideas, declared "sound" by Monsignor Cleary, cover the application of the Social Encyclicals to Spanish social problems, betterment of living conditions, higher wages and placing of good people in spheres of influence.

The two Rochester diocesan priests found Bishop Herrera "charming to talk to and one giving a feeling of deep spirituality while at the same time being practical in affairs of the times."
