"Why I Gave Blood"

Sergeant Douglas A. Fleischhauer

Korean War Veteran, "Interviews" Four Americans at a New York Blood Donor Center.

"Biggest Battle Still Ahead!" MARCIA STRAUSS, a nurse in a military hospital, told Sgt. Fleischhauer: "You saw it in Korea. I see it here, in my hospital, every day... men whose fighting days are over, yet their biggest battle—the battle for life itself—is still being fought. You can't watch that— as I have—and not come here to give blood."

"There's a Home Front, Too!" RALPH FOLZ, a brown-eyed steelworker, said: "They say we need so much blood. I think to myself, 'I work in a defense plant. Supposing a guy gets hurt bad. He's helping the guys in Korea, right? It's important having him down on the job right? They can send my blood where they need it most.'"

"Some Day I Might Need It!" NANCY RACKSTT, an attractive secretary, said: "I'm a Civil Defense worker. Many times I've thought, supposing we are attacked here... then what? People don't stop to think. They think there's not much fighting these days so why give blood. What I think is some day I might need it."

"It's Like Voting!" RICHARD GAY, businessman, spoke up: "I thought while I'm here I'll give blood. You know, you live in a town, you belong to a church, a lodge, a parents' group. You're a citizen, you've got certain obligations and privileges. This voting. Giving blood in like voting. It's an obligation and a privilege."

Diocesan Nurses' Prayer

By Rev. Charles B. Connell

(The following prayer for Nurses was composed by Father Connell, diocesan director of the Rochester Council of Catholic Nurses. The prayer was published in leaflet form with a picture of Our Lady of Perpetual Help on the front page, entitled "Our Patroness.")

O Divine Physician, bless me as I care for the broken and bruised members of Thy Mystical Body. Help me to use my vocation for Thy glory, the healing of the sick and my own salvation. Grant to my duties the power to do all things possible for the healing of bodies and the salvation of souls. Help my mind to seek the truth; direct my will to do good; open my eyes to every need; unstop my ears to every plea; loose my tongue to inspire goodness; seal my lips against all harshness; anoint my hands with the grace of healing; direct my feet to the path of duty. Let me see in every broken and bruised body Thine own body crushed and bleeding for the sins of the world. Let me hasten no less quickly to minister unto them, than did Veronica and the Holy Women come to comfort Thee. In Thee, O Jesus, I find my inspiration as a dispenser of all mercy. To Thee I will turn for strength in time of trial. With Thee I pray to be all things to all men, especially in their hour of need. Do Thou keep me always true to my calling, unstained by the evils of this world, unwavering in the loyalty I owe to my profession, so that I may one day hear those words of great promise: "Well done thou good and faithful servant. Enter thou into the joys of eternal life."

—Amien.
