WHAT'S DOING AT THE DALYS'

Teen-Age Driver

By Mary Tinley Daly

For months now, ever since Eileen's 16th birthday, we've been treated to statistics. It started with "Two girls in my class have their licenses. Isn't that terrific?"

Mary Daly

"Getting married that young?" teased the Head of the House.

"Daddy, be sensible," Eileen set him straight. "They can DRIVE CARS!"

As the weeks went on, the statistics changed: "Ten girls have their licenses." Then it was 15, then 20, until now the score stands at 25 in a class of 47 — Eileen being one of the unlicensed 22.

When we still didn't take the hint, Eileen employed more direct tactics.

"Just think what a lot of errands I could run," she suggested hopefully.

"DAD'S PRETTY GOOD at it," I answered. "So's Pat, and Johnny when he's home. We have plenty of drivers around here."

"Let's be realistic," Eileen said. "Supposin' Daddy and Pat and Johnny weren't here and there was an accident — say you fell and broke your leg. . ." Eileen elaborated on the grisly details.

"I hope you'd have sense enough to use a telephone instead of a car!" I laughed and Eileen joined in.

"No kidding, though," she went on. "I'd just love to learn to drive and would I be careful!"

TO MY SURPRISE, the Head of the House nodded agreement. "Why not?" he asked. "Eileen's a sound character, with good common sense — and quick reflexes. Anybody who wants to learn as much as that . . ." He glanced at me knowingly.

I knew what he meant. Far better for us to teach her.

* * *

And so the first lesson.

Curly dark hair pushed back of her ears, Eileen sat behind the wheel, clutching it with chalk-white fingers. As she turned the ignition switch, tiny beads of perspiration glistened on her upper lip.

"Now I get to say the 'ignition prayer,'" and she breathed the prayer we always say as we turn on the ignition: "Dear Lord, direct me." (This is our own abbreviated version of the longer, more elaborate prayer said before a real journey.)

"NOW PUT YOUR foot on the clutch," Eileen muttered to herself, "put 'er in first — like this. . . Right, Mom?"

"Then let the clutch pedal up s-l-o-w-l-y," I cautioned, prepared to have the car jump.

We didn't move an inch.

"What's the matter, Mom?" Perspiration was standing out on Eileen's forehead by this time. "Did I bust something — already?"

"WE BOTH FORGOT the emergency brake."

At the next try we made a reasonably creditable getaway. "Why, it's moving!" Eileen grinned. "And I'm driving!"

* * *

That first ride was not relaxing, but it was an eye-opener. Perhaps because of her keen desire to drive expertly, coupled with an innate sense of timing and distance, Eileen did well even that first mile.

ONCOMING CARS didn't disconcert her as they had Pat at her first lesson. ("Why does he have to come so close to the white line?") Nor did passing cars cause the sudden desire for speed Johnny had during his first lesson. ("I can keep ahead of him!")

Eileen was content to keep to the right and let cars pass her. "They're good drivers and I'm not—yet."

Now, after Eileen has had just a few lessons — we still have parking to master — both the Head of the House and I are convinced that Eileen is worthy of the trust.

SHE KEEPS the car under control, recognizes her own limitations and seems to realize that she is handling a possible death-dealing machine.

If she shows one sign of the smart-aleck, jeopardizing her own life or that of others, there will be no more driving for Miss Eileen — even though class statistics should show licensed drivers 46 to one!

AMONG WOMEN

Television Code

By Mary Lennon Snyder

Every viewer of television has seen flashed periodically on the screen the Seal of Good Practice and has heard an announced explanation of the meaning of this seal which is "displayed proudly" as visual proof that the particular TV station is conforming with the National Television Industry Code.

If a station violates the code, permission to display the seal is withdrawn.

To the system of Catholic leaders this is a good code of conduct and is general conforms to Christian morality.

The National Council of Catholic Men, 1815 Massachusetts Ave., Washington 5, D. C., will send upon request copies of the television code as a guide in judging whether or not any station is living up to the code.

IF AT ANY time a TV station is transmitting a program which seems to violate the commonly accepted standards of good taste, or the code, we should write the TV Review Board, 1771 N Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

In writing such complaints, we should be specific as to station, call letter, time we heard it and the reason for our objection.

WE SHOULD also let our local stations know of our objections at once. Any body such as the Code Board, being national in scope, takes time to move. By its very nature it is complex and slow-moving.

But besides "viewing with alarm" I wonder how many of us ever commend for services well rendered.

So many people wait until the muse of poetry strokes their brow before attempting to write a note and since literary inspiration may not be forthcoming the letter is unwritten.

JUST A SIMPLE note expressing gratitude, appreciation and approval in a few short words is adequate. No doubt thousands of Catholics saw the eight programs of NBC-TV "Frontiers of Faith" which dramatically explained the Sacraments.

It would be interesting to know how many wrote to the National Broadcasting Company in appreciation. Incidentally each of those eight programs cost NBC an average of $25,000.

IN DEALING with the question of television it is well to remember that the good Catholic must be articulate. Knowing that we have the truth, we must be willing to share it; and our efforts will be more successful if we make use of every good means at our disposal.

To do this we must take into account television, the newest member of the communications family.
