WHAT'S DOING AT THE DALYS' New Puppies

There's been excitement at our house as we awaited the birth of Tarby's puppies.

That "we" really should read "they" — for the Head of the House and I took a dim view of the business, feeling that it was a blessed event in the form of a bunch of unbroken dogs in the midst of winter is the ultimate in inconvenience.

But even we couldn't be too hard-boiled. So we cooperated in preparation for the big event.

The Head of the House helped the children build a nice warm maternity corner in the basement, complete with old quilts and hot-water bottles — a very fine set-up, doggie.

Markie and Pat, the most veterinary-minded, read endless books and pamphlets on how to take care of the mother-to-be.

"WHEN TARBY starts 'nesting,'" Markie told us, "pulling things apart like making a nest, that's when the whole thing'll start. We'll fill the hot-water bags, get warm milk ready and have plenty of clean rags ready."

Everything well under control... And then, last Sunday evening, Pat was out on a date and the Head of the House and I had gone to a party at the Schuettes'...

A wonderful party for their daughter Anne and son-in-law John Tasack.

When we came home, about nine, still full of the exhilaration of talking with old friends and meeting new ones, we noticed that the house looked like Christmas. Every light on from attic to basement... and there was Eileen, hostess-like, greeting us at the front door.

"LET ME hang your coat and hat for you, Daddy," Eileen offered with unaccustomed dash.

"Want to see the Sunday paper?" she went on, ushering us into the living room.

As "Markie" says, we really should stop referring to Tarby as "he."

Catholic Women Back Point Four

Washington (RNS)—Strong support for the government's Point Four Program of technical assistance to other nations was expressed here by the board of directors of the National Council of Catholic Women.

The board, holding its annual meeting, declared that a sense of social justice and charity will dictate that we must share with peoples of other nations not only in appreciation of mutual problems, but our technical knowledge of ways of meeting and solving them.

"There was little respite from the juvenile bloodbath on Christmas. Children's programs that day showed four murders, two fist fights, one pistol slugging, three policemen being beaten with gun butts, four shootings, two kidnappings, one gang fight and one jail break."

MRS. EISENHOWER GRATEFUL

AN INFANT OF PRAGUE states, costume of which was fashioned by Mrs. Joseph J. Orlando, 8 Manitow St. and sent Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower a prompt reply of appreciation.

Statue Pleases U. S. First Lady

A gift of an Infant Jesus of Prague statue sent to Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower by Mrs. Joseph J. Orlando of 8 Manitow St. brought a note of appreciation from the First Lady which Mrs. Orlando said she will treasure.

The statue was outfitted in a costume made of cream colored satin and gold sequins embedded on the lace.

Mrs. Eisenhower wrote: "Dear Mrs. Orlando: How very nice of you to send me the Miraculous Infant Jesus of Prague with its charming and beautiful costume."

"I shall treasure it because I know the time and effort you spent in dressing it and because of what the image represents."

I appreciate this token of your real friendship, and I thank you warmly for your generosity and kindness. Mamie Doud Eisenhower.
