600 Attend Dinner Marking Bausch & Lomb Centennial

Marking the Centennial of Bausch and Lomb Optical Company, more than 600 guests attended the Company's dinner Thursday of last week in the main plant's dining room.

Church dignitaries, industrial leaders, scientists, civic officials and press, radio and television representatives attended with plant executives.

Dr. Charles F. Kettering, one of America's leaders in technological research urged the 100-year-old Bausch and Lomb Optical Co. to "jump" into its second century with the same creative energy that has characterized the firm during its first.

The invocation at the dinner was pronounced by His Excellency Bishop Kearney and the closing prayer by Bishop Dudley S. Stark of the Episcopal diocese.

FEATURED IN THE speaking program was the announcement of Bausch and Lomb Science awards made down through the years, totaling $0,000 to 5,000 dollars. (Catholic high school graduates are recipients of these awards, one in each high school, each year.)

Other speakers included Joseph F. Taylor, president of B. and L. Co., Carl S. Hallauer, executive vice president; Carl L. Bausch, vice president and Dr. Mark Ellingson, president of Rochester Institute of Technology.

Thomas E. Hoffman, University of Rochester graduate and representative winner of the Bausch and Lomb Science Scholarship was introduced to the gathering.

A musical pageant tracing the optical firm's history from its beginning in the Reynolds Arcade on a capital of $00 to its present international, multi-million-dollar operation was featured by the Sales Chorus.
