Colorado Bars State Aid To Nun-Taught Schools
Denver — (AP) — The State Department of Educa­tion has withheld four miles through the Catholic schools here because of the state's new law limiting aid to schools with religious instruction.

The city receives $3,000,000 from religious sources, with approximately 300,000 pupils in the schools.

The total cost of Catholic school buildings and 173 lay instructors, and they utilize 6,790 religious teachers. Payments are made for operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.

Colorado Bars State Aid To Nun-Taught Schools
Denver — (AP) — The State Department of Educa­tion has withheld four miles through the Catholic schools here because of the state's new law limiting aid to schools with religious instruction.

The city receives $3,000,000 from religious sources, with approximately 300,000 pupils in the schools.

The total cost of Catholic school buildings and 173 lay instructors, and they utilize 6,790 religious teachers. Payments are made for operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.

Colorado Bars State Aid To Nun-Taught Schools
Denver — (AP) — The State Department of Educa­tion has withheld four miles through the Catholic schools here because of the state's new law limiting aid to schools with religious instruction.

The city receives $3,000,000 from religious sources, with approximately 300,000 pupils in the schools.

The total cost of Catholic school buildings and 173 lay instructors, and they utilize 6,790 religious teachers. Payments are made for operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.

Colorado Bars State Aid To Nun-Taught Schools
Denver — (AP) — The State Department of Educa­tion has withheld four miles through the Catholic schools here because of the state's new law limiting aid to schools with religious instruction.

The city receives $3,000,000 from religious sources, with approximately 300,000 pupils in the schools.

The total cost of Catholic school buildings and 173 lay instructors, and they utilize 6,790 religious teachers. Payments are made for operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.

Colorado Bars State Aid To Nun-Taught Schools
Denver — (AP) — The State Department of Educa­tion has withheld four miles through the Catholic schools here because of the state's new law limiting aid to schools with religious instruction.

The city receives $3,000,000 from religious sources, with approximately 300,000 pupils in the schools.

The total cost of Catholic school buildings and 173 lay instructors, and they utilize 6,790 religious teachers. Payments are made for operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.

Colorado Bars State Aid To Nun-Taught Schools
Denver — (AP) — The State Department of Educa­tion has withheld four miles through the Catholic schools here because of the state's new law limiting aid to schools with religious instruction.

The city receives $3,000,000 from religious sources, with approximately 300,000 pupils in the schools.

The total cost of Catholic school buildings and 173 lay instructors, and they utilize 6,790 religious teachers. Payments are made for operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.

Colorado Bars State Aid To Nun-Taught Schools
Denver — (AP) — The State Department of Educa­tion has withheld four miles through the Catholic schools here because of the state's new law limiting aid to schools with religious instruction.

The city receives $3,000,000 from religious sources, with approximately 300,000 pupils in the schools.

The total cost of Catholic school buildings and 173 lay instructors, and they utilize 6,790 religious teachers. Payments are made for operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.

Colorado Bars State Aid To Nun-Taught Schools
Denver — (AP) — The State Department of Educa­tion has withheld four miles through the Catholic schools here because of the state's new law limiting aid to schools with religious instruction.

The city receives $3,000,000 from religious sources, with approximately 300,000 pupils in the schools.

The total cost of Catholic school buildings and 173 lay instructors, and they utilize 6,790 religious teachers. Payments are made for operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.

Colorado Bars State Aid To Nun-Taught Schools
Denver — (AP) — The State Department of Educa­tion has withheld four miles through the Catholic schools here because of the state's new law limiting aid to schools with religious instruction.

The city receives $3,000,000 from religious sources, with approximately 300,000 pupils in the schools.

The total cost of Catholic school buildings and 173 lay instructors, and they utilize 6,790 religious teachers. Payments are made for operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The four schools have a total of 120 teachers. The total aid for religious instruction is $1,000,000 with annual operational expenses being $600,000, and operation and maintenance expenses being covered.

The city official told a fund raiser that the schools were not to be cut off, but that it would be a hardship for some of the families. The same official had been quoted as saying that the state law would not apply to religious schools.