Model of Shakespearean Stage, Stratford Festival

The Stratford Shakespearean Festival company headed by Alec Guinness, English film star, and Irene Worth, Old Vic Theatre actress, is scheduled to open next Monday, July 13, in Stratford, Ontario.

Stratford, a city of 18,000 population, is in southwestern Ontario, within easy driving distance of this area.

R. Smeet

The director of the Festival productions of "Richard III" and "All's Well That Ends Well" is Tyrone Guthrie of Old Vic Theatre and Edinburgh Festival fame, who did the Coronation presentation of "Henry VIII" in London.

ALEC GUINNESS will be playing the roles of Richard in "Richard III" and the King of France in "All's well". Irene Worth, American-born Old Vic actress who co-starred with Guinness in the Edinburgh Festival production of T. S. Eliot's "The Cocktail Party" in New York in 1950, will do the part of Queen Margaret in "Richard III" and Helena in "All's Well".

The supporting cast is made up of leading American actors and actresses, both stage and radio, with the addition of two English imports, Michael Bates from the Memorial Theatre in Stratford - upon - Avon, England, and Douglas Campbell from the Old Vic Theatre in London.

The Festival theatre, on the banks of the Avon River in Stratford city park, is a concrete and canvas structure seating an audience of 1,500. The foundation is concrete; the walls and roof are of canvas consisting of an inner and outer tent with three layers of canvas roofing specially designed for ventilation and acoustics. The entire tent is fire-proof.

BUILT IN A circle, the theatre is shaped like a pie with a one-quarter size slice occupied by stage and dressing rooms. Dressing rooms, storage space and exits are also built in beneath and behind the auditorium.

The stage projects into the auditorium with the audience in tiered seats on three sides, no member farther from the stage than 54 feet.

Designed by Tanya Moiseiwitsch, British theatrical designer, it is calculated to bring actors into as close contact as possible with the audience and is similar to the Shakespearean stage in its use of several levels, balcony and trap door.

Tanya Moiseiwitsch has also designed the costumes for the two plays with the exception of Irene Worth's ball gown in "All's Well", which was created by Valentina of New York.

"RICHARD III" is being done in period costumes worked out in sombre tones of grey and black relieved by scarlet and gold. "All's Well" (a sophisticated drawing room comedy version) is being presented in stylized modern dress.

The range of available accomodation in Stratford extends from modern hotel and motel facilities to supervised and inspected quarters in "pensions" and private homes. For peak periods accomodation facilities extend to surrounding towns and cities such as London, Kitchener and Woodstock, which all lie within an hour's driving distance of the Festival theatre.

Special catering arrangements have been made by the townspeople. Festival visitors who have special inquires should write direct to the Chairman of Accomodations Committee at 1 Market Place, Stratford.

TICKETS RANGE from $1.00 to $6.00 (Canadian funds). Because of the demand it would be best if all inquiries mention alternative dates. The Festival season runs till August 15 with the plays being performed on alternate nights, a matinee on Saturday.

Bookings may be made by writing direct to the Stratford Box Office at 34 Wellington St., Stratford, or the Toronto Box Office at Room 304, 2 College St., Toronto, Ontario.

Visiting Priest Deplores Vice Near U. S. Bases

• By FATHER PATRICK O'CONNOR
(Correspondent, N.C.W.C. News Service)

Tokyo — Four problems in Japan impressed Father George B. Ford, pastor of Corpus Christi parish, New York, with their urgency. They concern Japanese rearmament, moral conditions around U. S. army bases, the so-called "GI babies," and moral and spiritual values in education.

Father Ford, former U.S. Army chaplain, later student counsellor in Columbia University for 16 years, has spent two months in Japan under the auspices of the Japan Committee for Cultural Interchange. He took special interest in Japanese educational and social institutions.

"I have the conviction that the women, the educators and the youth are opposed to rearmament," he told this correspondent. "I understand their reasons, but I have represented to them that they ought to think beyond their immediate country and to try to place Japan in the society of the future. Until they think that far, I feel they haven't given thorough consideration to the question of rearmament."

FATHER FORD was shocked by the evidence of large-scale vice in the neighborhood of American bases in Japan. He found Japanese attitudes toward the U.S. influenced by this situation.

"All across Japan and among the most solid and respected thinkers, there's a growing resentment against the immoral conditions right at the door of every American base in the country," he said.

(Japanese exploiters have provided the lucrative facilities for this immorality. Many observers feel that determined action by U.S. and Japanese authorities could clean up the areas.)

Most persons would feel that the babies of mixed parentage should be accepted into the population, Father Ford said. He added: "There is great doubt about that solution for the Colored mixed (babies of Negro and Japanese parents), because they stand out so sharply here. If they were returned to the U.S., where there are 14 million Negroes, they would not have to suffer embarrassment during all their future years."

SOME AMERICAN families in Japan are anxious to adopt GI babies. "From one orphanage, where there were 106 'mixed' children, 76 were adopted," Father Ford said. "But U.S. law prevents their admission except by special act of Congress. That most restrictive law should be modified, if not revoked."

Educators here are unanimously concerned about moral and spiritual values in education, Father Ford found.

"The moral and spiritual values that have come out of the Judaeo-Christian tradition are not known to them," he said. "They are eager to discover them and implement them in education."

Father Ford returns to the U.S. by way of India, Israel, Rome, Germany, France, Spain and England.
