NEW And NOW

By ROBERT SMETT

Don't know about you, but I'm a Fran Allison fan. Miss Allison was recently the subject of the "This Is Your Life" TV show, which on viewing I usually swear "this is the last time."

B. Smett

I greatly admire the ingenuity of the production and the painstaking programming, but at times it becomes almost embarrasing with sentimentality. You want to crawl under a chair and make like a Steig cartoon.

However, Fran Allison's life was a real treat. Some facts were revealed concerning the automobile accident that almost took her life. Her face was left badly scarred and, although later repaired through surgery, the grit and determination necessary to carry her through that difficult period borders on the heroic.

Fran was a school teacher in LaPorte, Iowa, when she decided to make a stab at radio in 1934. She was a graduate of Coe College with a degree in music and education and her experience amounted to singing in the village choir. She joined a radio station in Waterloo and launched on her new career.

THE ROLE THAT made her famous with radio listeners was created quite by accident. One day while Fran was awaiting her turn at the microphone, the announcer turned to her and jokingly said, "Well, well, and here's Aunt Fanny. Say something, won't you, Aunt Fanny?"

And she did. For the remainder of the program she ad libbed in the vernacular of the small-town gossip—and the audience responded.

This mastery of the ad lib and her quick, accurate ear led to a television break. She just happened to be in the waiting room when this fellow with the puppets came in. He needed help. She stepped in. Result—"Kukla, Fran and Ollie"—in our estimation, one of the most intelligent and entertaining TV features.

Fran was away from home when the previously mentioned accident occured. On "This Is Your Life," she recounted how a phone call was made to her mother, who because of the distance was not able to be with her daughter on that terrible night of crisis.

"But she did the next best thing," Fran remembered, "she sat up all night and said her rosary. And so here I am!" She was pretty definite about that.

Gene Lockhart, famous star of stage and screen, will be in Rochester soon for a week-long run of "On Borrowed Time." Fulton Oursler has a wonderful little story about the actor in his "Modern Parables." It goes like this:

Gene Lockhart was at his California home when he received an offer to replace an ailing star in a Broadway hit.

An actor of great qualities was needed at once to take over. Gene had not seen the play, but now he read the script, sent to him, air mail and special delivery, with pleas for a quick decision.

IT WAS A serious and moving drama of American life with a tragic ending. As Gene turned the pages, studying scene after scene, he recognized their great dramatic force. But also, in line after line, he found bloodcurdling oaths, sacrilege, and blasphemy. For Gene, these lines posed a problem.

Here was an opportunity that any actor capable of playing such a heavy role would welcome. Naturally, Gene Lockhart wanted that opportunity. But this veteran of 40 years of professional life is something more than an actor. He is above all else an ardent and devoted Christian.

What we he to do? Turn down the part? Or compromise? Tuck away his Christianity in his pocket-book and go out on the stage to take the name of the Lord, his God, in vain?

That night Gene dispatched a telegram to New York. The answer was Yes; he would accept the terms and play the part. On the long train ride eastward he poured over the play, memorizing his lines. As soon as he reached New York, a rehearsal was called, and Gene hurled himself into the stormy and tempestuous play.

IN THE DARKENED theater, only a few people sat watching: producer, director, author. All were stirred by the vigor and imaginative sweep with which he took the stage and brought a complex character to life. At the close of the rehearsal, they congratulated him with delight.

Not a word of criticism! Not an objection! No one seemed even to notice what had happened.

Yet all the cursing was gone. The blasphemy was obliterated. Not once was the name of God taken in vain. The new star of the play had thrown overboard every unholy word.

His action might have caused trouble. The author might have insisted that his words be spoken as written. They might have yanked Gene before Equity. But no one did anything except the cash customers, who came to the box office in greatly increasing numbers. The show was a bigger hit than ever.

Perhaps it was precisely be cause Gene Lockhart, star of "Death of a Salesman," had dared to be true to himself.

Evans, Marguerite Higgins Win Christopher Awards

New York —(NC)— Actor Maurice Evans and roving foreign correspondent Marguerite Higgins of the New York Herald Tribune are among the winners of Christopher Awards for the second quarter of 1953, the Christophers announced here.

Others named for awards include British author R. V. C. Bodley, for his biography of the French soldier-ascetic, Charles de Foucauld, "The Warrio Saint"; Broadway producer Leland Hayward, and composer Artie Glen, for his popular song "Crying in the Chapel."

MARGUERITE HIGGINS

THESE AND other winners are to receive the bronze Christopher medallion for works reflecting "the God-given talent that can be exerted by one individual in the literary and entertainment fields," according to Father James Keller, M.M., director of the Christopher.

In making the awards, the Christophers aim at focusing "attention on the creative power resting in the hands of the individual writer, director, producer and to encourage that power to be used, under God, for the good of all."

IN DESIGNATING Miss Higgins for an award, the Christophers cited her article on "Soviet Power" in the May 24 edition of the This Week magazine Sunday supplement—a detailed appraisal of the rapidly growing material power of Russia and when and how its production will match that of the United States and the West.

Maurice Evans' award was for his work as the producer of "Hamlet" over the NBC television network last April. Medallions were also awarded to the director, Albert McCleery, and the adaptors, Mildred F. Alberg and Tom Hughes Sand.
