Proposed Sketch Of Mount Carmel High School In Auburn

THE CARMELITE FATHERS present the above perspective of the proposed Mt. Carmel High School, Auburn, New York.

The low modern school will be situated on a beautiful site south of the new Whiteflora Drive as shown in the above drawing. The 400 seat cafeteria appears at the far left of the building with the large mass of the combination gymnasium-auditorium in the background. The gymnasium will have ample spectator capacity, a large platform, and a collegiate sized basketball court, with ample lockers for both boys and girls.

The low central wing incorporates administration and offices, a large library, science lecture room, science laboratory, home-making kitchen, home-making classroom, and a small chapel.

At the right of the building appears the long north-south classroom wing which will contain ten large homerooms and two large homeroom study halls. Counselors' offices and teachers' lounges are also included in this wing.

The entire program has been planned for future expansion which would incorporate a second classroom wing to the far right of the perspective and a possible future auditorium to the far left of the presently proposed structure.

The project has been designed by Beardsley & Beardsley, Architects, Auburn, New York.

Carves Crucifix In Priest's Memory

Freedom Village, Korea—American war prisoners repatriated by the Chinese Communists here hold a three-foot crucifix hand-carved by a Jewish marine captain in memory of Chaplain (Capt.) Emil J. Kapoun of Ft. Belknap, Kan. Father Kapoun died May 8, 1951, of "trauma unknown" while a prisoner of the North Korean Reds. He was listed as missing in action on Nov. 20, 1950 and was last seen caring for wounded men. The officers who brought the crucifix across the lines over Red objections are left to right: Capt. Joseph O'Connor of Spring City, Pa.; Marine Warrant Officer Felix J. McCoil of Glendale, and Lt. Ralph A. Nardella of Paterson, N. J. The men said that Father Kapoun, while in prison, did almost the impossible in helping his fellow POWs, both spiritually and materially. They said that the priest heard their confessions even on his deathbed. The crucifix will be forwarded to Father Kapoun's home town parish in Kansas.

Freed Yanks Bring Back Crucifix, Chaplain's Pyx

Freedom Village, Munsan, Korea (AP) — Four thousand nine hundred ten men have come through Freedom Village into the free world again in the past 33 days. Now they have all gone their way.

From the temporary altars of the converted warehouse they have gone on to the permanent altars and churches of home.

The last Catholic to come through from the Red prison camp on the final day was Sergeant Martin Watson of Deep River, Conn. He was one of the last three released.

FRIENDS MEETING the liberated men here on the last day of Operation "Big Switch" were Father (Comdr.) Francis T. O'Leary of Boston, recently assigned division chaplain of the First Marine Division; Father (Lt. Comdr.) Leo Rice, Redemptorist Marine chaplain from New York; Father (Capt.) Leonard Paznoskas of Scranton, Army chaplain; and Father (Lieut.) Elmer Ernst, Marine chaplain and member of the Precious Blood Fathers, from Fort Wayne, Ind.

A dramatic scene was witnessed when four men in blue prison garb arrived bringing a four-foot crucifix carved in a former prison camp by Capt. Gerald Pirsk, Marine pilot from Chicago.

This crucifix has become a symbol of the faith and charity shown by the late Father (Capt.) Emil Kapoun, of Wichita, and preserved by the men of his camp.

HE DIED in captivity in May of 1950.

Lt. Ralph Nardella, born in Italy and now of Paterson, N. J., carried the crucifix into the alms house serving as a chapel here. Prison camp comrades who also came under Father Kapoun's influence accompanied him. They were Capt. Joseph L. O'Connor of Spring City, Pa.; Lt. Paul O'Dowd of Berkeley, Cal., and Warrant Officer Felix McCoil,

Double Rites To Consecrate N. Y. Prelates

New York (AP) — The consecration of Bishops-elect Edward A. Dargatzis and Walter P. Kellenberg will take place in St. Patrick's cathedral on Monday, October 5, the Chancery Office announced. His Eminence Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, will act as Consecrator at the double ceremony. Both Prelates were named Auxiliary Bishops of New York.

Card. Spellman Repudiates Use Of Name On Booklet

New York (AP) — Catholics here have been warned that a booklet, "The Secret Of Happiness," containing the 15 prayers of St. Bridget of Sweden, does not have official approval, as its publishers have asserted.

At the direction of His Eminence Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, a letter was sent out by Msgr. John J. Maguire, Chancellor to all pastors in the archdiocese. The letter directed the pastors to alert their parishioners with regard to the circumstances surrounding publication of the prayer booklet.

THE TEXT of the letter follows: "The attention of the Chancery Office has been drawn to a booklet entitled 'The Secret Of Happiness,' containing the Fifteen Prayers of St. Bridget, published by the Cardinal Publishing Company, New York.

UN Charter 'Inadequacies' Cited By Secretary Dulles Noted By Bishops In 1945

By G. R. BRUNST (Foreign Editor, N.C.W.C. News Service)

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, in an address before the American Bar Association, has advocated extensive revisions of the United Nations Charter. He says that the document, which was drafted at San Francisco in 1945, "now reflects serious inadequacies."

Few, if any will disagree with Mr. Dulles that these "inadequacies" exist and cry for remedy. Many, among them the best friends of the United Nations, will add that the very life and future of the international world organization depends on thoroughness and honesty with which these remedies are effected.

How ever, not a few will seriously dispute the views of the Secretary of State where he somehow appears to present the thesis that the shortcomings of the UN Charter derive not so much from the document itself but rather from circumstances and developments which were either unknown at the time the drafters of the Charter or could not possibly be foreseen by them.

SUCH CRITICS will say that the "inadequacies" which Mr. Dulles rightly complains about today, were plain as a pikestaff at the time of the Charter drafting in San Francisco. It is not only "now," as Dulles asserts, that they are "reflected." They were there from the very beginning. And, what is even more significant, they were pointed out at the time by persons who, while fully recognizing the need of a world organization, set forth the basic principles that ought to guide its construction.

In view of all this, it is highly illuminating to review the three principal "inadequacies" noted by Mr. Dulles as being "now" reflected, in the light of statements made in 1945 by the American Bishops in widely published formal statements.

Events have proved that the evaluations placed by the American Bishops upon the ideas guiding the preparation of the Charter document was correct right from the start. The Bishops did not have to wait eight years to see the "inadequacies" "reflected."

Mr. Dulles traces the first "inadequacy" to "ignorance" arising from the fact that the Charter was completed before the first atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima. He says that the Charter is a pre-atomic agreement and thus became "obsolete" before it actually came into force.

This appears to betray a conception of a world society which is utterly at variance with the "juridical world institution" of which the Bishops spoke in a statement issued on April 15, 1945. The principle on which the Bishops insisted—that God placed the nations in society, mutually dependent upon each other, and that society should be governed by laws that never become "obsolete" nor could an atomic bomb or hydrogen bomb render a world society "obsolete" which is based upon this principle.

THE STATESMEN drafting the UN Charter may well have been "ignorant" of the early dawn of the atomic era. Nobody could blame them for that. But if they were equally ignorant of those timeless principles which would enable an ordered human society to cope with such developments as the atomic bomb, then their ignorance, far from being a valid excuse, would make them responsible for the "inadequacies" of the Charter that are so glaringly obvious today.

(2) The second "inadequacy" noted by Mr. Dulles "sprang from the fact that the three leaders who planned the United Nations were President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and (Continued on page 6)
