Pontiff Urges Penal Code For 'War Crimes'

Castelgandolfo, Italy — (NC) — Adoption of a code of international law for the proper punishment of "war crimes" and other crimes of international consequence was urged by his Holiness Pope Pius XII in a lengthy address to jurists from more than a score of nations.

The jurists, who were received in audience at the papal summer palace here, were in Rome for the Sixth International Congress of Criminal Law.

"The certitude, confirmed by treaties, that one must render an account—even if the criminal act succeeds, even if the offense is committed abroad, even if, after having committed it, one flees to a foreign country—is a guarantee not to be underestimated," the Holy Father told the jurists.

THE PONTIFF was referring to all manner of crimes, but chiefly to unjust war which "provokes ruin, suffering and unimaginable horror." He said that "the community of nations must reckon with unprincipled criminals who, in order to realize their ambitious plans, are not afraid to unleash total war."

At the outset, the Pope drew a distinction by stating that the absolute necessity for self-defense permits nations the right to arm themselves for such purpose, "a right which cannot be denied any state."

"That, however," he declared, "does not in any way alter the fact that unjust war is to be accounted as one of the very gravest crimes which international law must prescribe, and must punish with the heaviest penalties, the authors of which are in every case guilty and liable to the punishment which has been agreed upon."

THE POPE said that "the world war through which humanity has lived and the events which have taken place in totalitarian states have given rise to many other evils, at times even more serious, which a code of international criminal law should render impossible, or from which it ought to free the community of nations."

Pope Pius recalled that during recent wars both between countries and within them, "deeds were done governed only by the law of violence and success." It was not blind natural forces, but men who, now in savage passion, now in cold reflection, he said, "brought unspeakable sufferings, misery and extermination to individuals, communities and to whole nations."

Those guilty of such actions, the Holy Father went on, always felt secure either in victory or in case of defeat, when they could flee to a foreign country. Consequently, such instances should be the object of a new code of international criminal law which would be equally effective everywhere.

Even in a just and necessary war, there can be crimes, the Pope warned, since, all ways leading to victory are not thereby justifiable.

THE world in which we live is plagued by evil forces. A barbarian ideology threatens our standards of morality and decency. There are those who would assist these alien forces. There are others who, bereft of will, drift supinely with this tide which threatens us.

The attitudes are wrong. They are the surest way to destroy the America which faith made great. For America is built on Faith, faith in God and faith in man.

It is the tremendous force of faith which gives hope and pride to the individual. Faith is the source of our national energy.

It is an essential ingredient of free government.

The youth of this nation have it in their power to sustain the great dynamo which is the heart of liberty, Youth with faith - vigorous, indomitable, all-embracing, faith is the hope of the future.
