Catholic To Head British Atom Study

London — (NC) — Sir Edwin Noel Plowden, a Catholic, is to take charge of the development of atomic energy in Britain.

According to a government announcement, the 46-year-old civil servant will become chairman of the new Atomic Energy Commission which the government is proposing to establish once the necessary legislation has been passed by Parliament.

Roff Guild Holds Matinee For School Drama Groups

Drama groups of all the city high schools will be guests of the Roff Guild of St. John Fisher College at a special Matinee performance of "Only An Orphan Girl," on Sunday, Dec. 6.

The presentation of this old-fashioned melodrama is centrally staged with the audience seated tavern style about tables with entre'acte entertainment of the type enjoyed by our grandparents.

BASED ON THE conviction that the "amateur" theatre has a place of importance and integrity in the culture of this community the Roff Theatre promises an instructive as well as entertaining production according to the Rev. Adelore L. Houde, C.S.B., Ph.D., Director of Dramatics of the College.

"Since old-fashioned Melodrama went in for elaborate and exaggerated realism, such a play offers an excellent opportunity for students of the theatre to observe the fundaments of stage movements and reactions. These same movements and reactions, when toned down, are just what we should like in even the most modern of plays," Father Houde said in announcing the special matinee.

AFTER THE Matinee performance, the cast and production staff will be available for questions regarding any point pertaining to the production.

"Only An Orphan Girl," will be presented by the Roff Theatre at St. John Fisher College on Dec. 4, 5, 11, and 12 at 8:15 p.m.

Morally Objectionable Films Increased During Past Year

Washington—(NC)—The attention of the U.S. Bishops was called to an increase during the past year of "morally objectionable in part" films by both American and foreign producers.

The report was made to the U.S. Bishops at their annual meeting here by Bishop Michael J. Ready of Columbus, chairman of the Committee on Motion pictures.

BISHOP READY reported that the Legion of Decency's classification B — morally objectionable in part for all — showed a four per cent increase over last year for domestic films and a 20 per cent increase for foreign films.

The Bishops of the committee expressed the hope that the commercial success of these B films would not act as an encouragement to producers or theater owners for future exhibition of films of this type.

The Bishops also noted with concern that many theaters, including some owned by large circuits, have been exhibiting films condemned by the Legion of Decency.

"The managements of these theaters are reminded," the Bishops of the committee noted, "that the Catholics of the United States are pledged to remain away altogether from theaters which show such films as a matter of policy. Theaters which consider showing of a condemned film in the future should bear in mind the potential loss of Catholic patronage not only for that attraction but also others which follow it in the same theater."

BISHOP READY gave these statistics for films reviewed during the past year by the Legion of Decency:

One hundred forty U.S. films, or 41.67 per cent were A-1 or morally unobjectionable for general patronage.

One hundred twenty-four, approximately 37 per cent, were A-II, or morally unobjectionable for adults.

Seventy-one, or slightly more than 21 per cent, were B, morally objectionable in part for all.

Only one U.S. film out of a total of 336 was condemned — The Moon Is Blue. This film was produced independently and has been refused the Production Code Seal by the Motion Picture Association. No picture with the Code Seal was condemned.

OF THE 47 foreign films reviewed by the Legion eight, or 17 per cent, were classified A-I.

Eighteen, or about 38 per cent, were classified A-II.

Eighteen more were classified B.

Three were condemned.

The number of foreign films condemned showed a decrease of 11 per cent from the preceding year, Bishop Ready reported.

NEW And NOW

By ROBERT SMETT

This week the movie, "The Moon Is Blue", was advertised in the daily newspapers for its 10th and final week in this area. Included in the advertisement was a quote from TIME magazine, "Entertaining! A picture that is always sophisticated, literate, and in good taste!"

R. Smett

The dictionary, in speaking of "good taste", mentions "quality, as judged by persons with such taste." Calling the film in question "literate" is a bit confusing. It either means that the picture is "learned", "literary", or that it "can read and write."

But now, "sophisticated", there's a word for you. Somewhere in the word there is the Greek stem meaning "wisdom", dictionaries say "worldly-wise".

A few weeks ago a Courier reader called on the 'phone, quite perturbed with this writer's frequent blasting of "The Moon Is Blue", which this same lady described as "sophisticated".

This writer has had a pet peeve over a number of years, namely, F. Hugh Herbert, author of "The Moon Is Blue", who for many years has been hoodwinking people with his peculiar type of "sophistication".

IN THE PAST few weeks the tables have turned on Mr. Herbert with the production of his latest play "A Girl Can Tell". And this table-turning has come from none other than the above mentioned magazine, TIME, the dictionary of the sophisticates, and The New Yorker magazine, bible of sophistication.

The Nov. 9 issue of TIME has this to say: "Playwright Herbert, still concerned with discreetly amorous young girls, is dallying with dalliance, still writing under the sign of Virgo in the spirit of Capricorn."

TIME, the iconoclast of all that smacks of puritanism, ends up with this about Mr. Herbert's latest: "Where it is not determinedly cute it is studiously carnal. It is perhaps enough by now that Mr. Herbert has turned youth into a commodity without also making innocence a gimmick."

What was that you said on the telephone, lady? — cute, sophisticated?

Now, for some more. And this from none other than Wolcott Gibbs — Gibbs the smart, the intelligent, the sophisticated, the drama (with a capital "d") critic of The New Yorker.

Says Mr. Gibbs in the Nov. 7 issue (and listen to this, lady): "F. Hugh Herbert, who has been falsely accused of sophistication as the result of a film version of one of his plays, demonstrated the basic absurdity of this charge last week with a comedy called "A Girl Can Tell."

"THIS PIECE, dealing with Mr. Herbert's favorite, and conceivably only, dilemma — that of how far a young woman can push a man without really getting messed up — is like "Kiss and Tell" and "The Moon Is Blue," only a great deal more so.

"Like her predecessors in those works, the heroine is a flirt, a term not altogether dissimilar to describing the industrious Landru as a masher, but instead of confining her activities to one or two men, she is visibly involved with six and agitates several more by way of the telephone.

"Her virtue, of course, remains technically intact through all these skirmishings, but there are some close calls, and the whole entertainment could hardly be more repellent. As I've said, however, any accusation of sophistication brought against Mr. Herbert is a base libel.

"FOR THE benefit of those who want to delve still farther into this tiresome matter, the plot of "A Girl Can Tell" takes the form of a series of disclosures to a fifteen-year-old girl by her mother, who seems to feel that the story of her innocently disgusting past may be of some assistance to the child in conducting her own life — an opinion that strikes me as open to debate."

Regarding the performances of the actors in "A Girl Can Tell," Mr. Gibbs says: "There is not much to be said about the participants in this romp, since it is manifestly unfair to condemn them for appearing to be vacant and contemptible people when their author has presented them with no possible alternative." The critic concludes his article by saying that the actors "were usually hopelessly bogged down in the morass of tasteless caricature. Mr. Herbert acted as his own director and brought out, I'm sure, the qualities in the script that seemed most titillating to him."

So, after building up a tower of insidiousness over a period of years and plays, Mr. Herbert has finally tumbled, to stew in his own juice. Even the clique of "sophisticates" has turned against him (his latest effort being "literate" enough so that even they could see what he has been doing).

Now, members of the local chapter of the worldly-wise, do you finally catch on to one F. Hugh Herbert.

Hey, lady, how about it — cute — sophisticated????

Tennis Feature Listed Saturday Over WHAM-TV

"Get On The Ball," a television feature produced by the Christophers, will be presented by WHAM-TV in Rochester, on Saturday, Nov. 28, at 4:30 p.m.

The setting will be the tennis courts of the Beverly Hills Hotel in Hollywood, highlighted by the appearance of tennis champs Jack Kramer, Pancho Segura, Ken McGregor and Frank Sedgmore in an actual match.

Lighter moments will be taken care of by Hollywood actors Pat O'Brien, Harpo Marx, Jerry Colonna, Charles Farrell and Jimmy Gleason.
