Princess Ileana Calls Communism Religion of Evil

Communism was described as "a religion of evil, utterly lacking in all moral standards," by Princess Ileana of Romania, speaking in the Thomas More Lecture Forum at Rochester Chamber of Commerce, Tuesday night.

The Princess, also Archduchess of Austria and great-granddaughter of Queen Victoria of England whose homeland is blacked out by Communism urged Americans to see the battle between the free world and Communism as the battle for the world's future.

"Our whole civilization," she told a capacity audience in the large hall of the Chamber, "is based on certain standards of what is wrong and what is right. The Communist has none of the standards that we understand — neither of moral good or evil, of freedom, or of the value of human life."

WHEN THE Communists assumed control in Romania, she said, unification and agrarian reforms already had been accomplished by her father. Farms were privately owned, none measuring over 500 acres, she said; 94 per cent of the homes were private property; industries were small and free of government control, the economy was stabilized.

"When the Communists entered, there was no section nor age group which they did not immediately penetrate and regulate. Communications, railroads, aviation, highways and all provisions and property were stringently controlled. Money was devalued to one-twentieth of its value, and the people—all of us —were reduced to barter."

"COMMUNISM," she said, "is a religion which has its martyrs, its prophets and its ministers, who cannot understand and have no tolerance for people who still possess moral standards of any kind other than materialistic gain. It often is supported by intellectuals who have lost their moral footing and seek an explanation and theory of history.

"We must seek to align ourselves with our basic beliefs and have the courage to live them and be unafraid to die for them if necessary. We belong to the large community of the human race, and we must live in that community in Christian love and human understanding."
