Women's College Presents
Actress, Madeline McNamara

Miss Madeline McNamara, internationally-known One-Woman Dramatist, will entertain students, faculty and friends of Nazareth College Friday evening, Feb. 12, with a program of her distinctive Dramatologies in the college auditorium on East Ave.

A resident of Corning, N. Y., she is the sister of the Rev. Robert McNamara, professor of Church History, at St. Bernard's Seminary.

Miss McNamara comes highly recommended, having performed in Rome and Paris as well as in Washington, D. C.; Savannah, Ga.; Atlantic City, N. J.; Richmond and Norfolk, Va.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Akron, Toledo and Cleveland, O.; Minnesota, Massachusetts, Connecticut and other places.

According to the Rev. Donald Cleary, former National Newman Clubs chaplain, hers is "the highest type entertainment."

SHE WILL DRAW from her repertoire of epitomized plays in the Vanguard, Cyrano De Bergerac, Paolo and Francesca and dramatic monologues — Mavourneen, The Rancher's Wife, New Year's Resolutions, Red Beret, The Lady with the Lamp, Dress Rehearsal, William Goes to Camp, The Clock Struck Eleven, The Chorus Girl and The Intelligence Test.

According to the Bulletin of the American Women's Association of New York City, Miss McNamara's "sensitive delineations of character leave an unforgettable picture in the minds of the audience."

A CRITIC FOR the Washington (D. C.) Star reported, "It is a pleasant experience to watch Miss McNamara. Equally adept at exciting the risibilities or flicking the heartstrings, she demonstrated a superb fluency from one character to another; a presentation of marked effectiveness resulted."

Miss McNamara's appearance is being sponsored by the Nazareth College Committee on Lectures and Recitals as one in its series of cultural, literary, historical and scientific programs designed to enrich the regular instruction of the students.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Donald Wallers and bridesmaids were Miss Sara Jane Love, Clifton Springs and Mrs. Charles Day, Phelps.

Jerry Driscoll, Clifton Springs, was best man and ushers were Harry Lewis, Newark, and Robert Chrosniak of Buffalo.

Evidence Library

The Catholic Evidence Library of Rochester, located in Columbus Civic Center, offers an example of the way in which a group of zealous Catholics can spread the influence of the Catholic press.

Early in November 1933 the Library observed the twentieth anniversary of its founding. I have a report of that meeting from which I shall quote today.

Miss Marion Warner, librarian in charge, presented the speaker of the evening, the Rev. Benedict Ehmman, pastor of St. Mary's of the Lake, Watkins Glen, with these words:

"Twenty years ago, Father Benedict Ehmman sensed the need of distributing Catholic truth and literature. So he gave his own books as a nucleus for the present library. He not only gave his books but he gave his time, his talents, and his money. He organized a corps of workers. We have two of them with us still, Mrs. Charlotte Gardner and Miss Lucy Sheehan."

The report continues:

"IN HIS RESPONSE Father Ehmman stated that Miss Monica Quilivan should have been included among those mentioned, because without her he never could have established the library that Miss Quilivan was a librarian at the University of Rochester, and helped Father organize the library by processing the books. Then Father compared the present library with the one that was there when he left Rochester, and commented on its growth and added attractiveness."

Since the committee had requested Father to review a book for the occasion, he chose "The Long Loneliness" by Dorothy Day. Following the review a question period was held, after which refreshments were served.

MRS. RICHARD WEDDER, President of the Deaneary Council, was honorary chairman. The library aides with Mrs. Frank T.

WHAT'S DOING AT THE DALY'S

Controversy rages at our house — but that's nothing new. Question before the house this time is: Do guests no-
Ho-trivialities in a home? The Head of the House, he he guest or host, wouldn't notice if the washing machine were at the front door or the grand piano in the kitchen.

It's an admirable trait — up to a point — we admit, making for complete ease of manner, but it does, rather take away from the party atmosphere one likes to impart — the "I-knew-you-were coming-so-I-baked-a-cake" school of thought, on my side of the fence.

We both have followers, though some of the children are middle-of-the-roads, believing that you ought to pick up saddle ox-fords from under the davenport and remove school books from chairs, but that a mid-week silver polish is a waste of time and effort.

The whole thing was brought to a head when my turn came to entertain "the girls," as the children facetiously refer to their mother's club members. Matter of fact, "the girls" wouldn't care if saddle ox-fords and school books remained in their accustomed places. And as far as "the girls" are concerned, we believe with the Head of the House — take it easy, have fun and enjoy your guests.

BUT HERE'S where the gimmick comes in — when it's my turn, only every 18 months, that meeting has been a nice little hook on which to hang home improvements. After all, you have to do something in the way of redecorating at 18 month intervals — and "the girls" visit made a convenient deadline.

Usually it has worked... I would be so glad to have my living room painted by next month, I'd say plaintively. "It's my turn for the girls" (without these oral quotes).

Sure enough, the following week-end, ladders would be up. Often-times, just a chance remark that the girls were due in June would get the porch furniture painted in time to use it the early part of the summer.

This time, though, the gimmick no longer worked. Neither did the Head of the House nor the offspring.

"We've been havin' people here all the time," Markie said, reasonably enough. "Having fun too. Nobody notices."

HERE WAS ONE on my side slipping over to the other.

Come to think of it, maybe I'd been overworking "the girls" deal — probably get places faster in the home-decoration department by hanging major improvements on teen-age gatherings.

"Well, maybe they pretend not to notice," I sighed, still hoping for a resurgence of interest.
