True Christian

Hence the true Christian, product of Christian education, is the supernatural man who thinks, judges and acts constantly and consistently in accordance with right reason illuminated by the supernatural light of the example and teaching of Christ; in other words, to use the current terms, the true and finished man of character. — Pope Pius XI.

WHAT'S DOING AT THE DALY'S

An 'Old Grad' At Trinity

By Mary Tinley Daly

This column began as a quasi-erudite discussion of Catholic higher education for women, occasioned by the celebration of the 50th commencement of Trinity College in Washington, D.C.

Mary Daly

One can't, I find, "discuss" one's alma mater objectively—any more than one can "discuss' children without thinking of one's own. . . . So those first pages went into the wastebasket!

For Trinity is something personal to each of her 3300 graduates and to all those others who spent one, two or three years under the Red Roof. They return with the feeling of "coming home."

This reunion year, of course, will be particularly significant. In that line of cap-and-gowned figures filing into Notre Dame Chapel will be a representative cross section of Trinity's daughters, as different from one another as age and background, temperment and geographical location can make them. Yet, somethow, there is a common bond—the imprint that four years under the Red Roof with its gold cross atop has left on each.

Some will not be in cap and gown. They will wear the habits of their orders. But for these few days they will not be "Sister Superior," "Sister Anastasia"—just "Sally" and "Alice."

And the rest of us won't be Principal of P.S. 45, Miss Government Official, President of the Women's Club or even Mrs. John Smith. we'll be Grace and Jane, Helen and Mary.

LOOKING OVER that line from the Class of '04 to that of '54, Trinity will see the product of her half-century of "higher education for women":

There is the current graduating class — fresh-faced in spite of recent grueling comphrehensives—reluctantly leaving the protection of scholastic walls but well equipped and etager to take their places in the fascinating new fields open to trained women.

The graduates of a few years ago, some taking the week-end off from their professions, others arriving just as the line forms, rushing into caps and gowns with the explanation, "I had to feed the baby his breakfast before I left, but Bob will carry on."

Perhaps the smallest group of all is the "five-year-outers"— It's easy enough when you have just one baby," they explain. "I had to plan this for weeks, but I just couldn't miss it."

The girls who graduated during the war years—some widowed, some having had to adjust to difficult conditions they never imagined when they were up front in that line.

The line goes on . . . social workers, teachers, nuns, scientist's, mothers of growing families.

THE STEP IS more sedate toward the middle of the line, gowns show mends that cover moth holes, caps are a bit battered. There's a bit of whispering, "Bill's being ordained next month," "My daughter's in this year's class" . . .

Toward the end of the line there is a perceptible change—lines in the faces, plenty of gray hair, here and there a hearing aid carefully concelaed beneath a fresh hair-do, an arthritic twing that makes genuflecting a minor torture.

And then, at the very end, are our "Golden Girls"—the nine returning for their fiftieth reunion—all the living members of a class of 16.

We remember hearing of them ever since we first knew Trinity—that valient little band who came when the main building was under construction, when "higher education for women" was looked on askance. They were our pioneers, proving that Catholic higher education was for women, as Cardinal Gibbons maintained and as they have proved.

SOMEHOW, THE traditional prayer—the Trinity prayer - that opened every class during those four college years is still with us, with all of us in that line, still applicable to everything we do:

May the power of the Father govern and protect us,
May the wisdom of the Son teach and enlighten us,
May the love of the Holy Ghost renew and quicken us,
May the blessing of the all-holy Trinity, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, be with us now and forevermore. Amen.

SEVEN PHYSICAL WAYS

There are seven ways in which Charity may be expressed physically: to feed the hungry; to give drink to the thirsty; to clothe the naked; to succor the stranger; to visit the sick; to ransom the captive; to bury the dead.
