

'Father Brown' Film Wins Praise In London Premiere

London, England (NC) — Catholic and secular newspaper critics gave uniformly high praise to the world's first film of "Father Brown," G. K. Chesterton's beloved priest-detective. The film had its premiere in one of the biggest theaters in London's West End.

Producer of the film was an American, Paul Finer Moss, who came over from Hollywood for the purpose and has since bought the film and TV rights in collaboration with Columbia Pictures.

THE MOVIE tells the story of Father Brown's involved and amusing pursuit across Europe of a notorious French thief, Flambeau, who has stolen a relic from his church. A complication is the priest's wish to keep the police off the track until he has not only recovered the cross but converted the thief.

Even Chesterton enthusiasts who raised eyebrows when the film was suggested agreed that the movie was as faithful a portrayal as possible on the screen of the wise, endearing and meek little priest-detective, Alex Guinness, who plays Father Brown, won all-round praise for his performance.

The world premiere was a charity performance in aid of the Hospital of St. Joan and St. Elizabeth, operated without state aid here by the Sisters of Mercy.

Sister Magdalena Receives Candy For Korean Youths

A SHIPMENT of candy for Korean children was presented to Sister Magdalena by Barton's Confectionery, candy manufacturer and retail chain, for distribution to children treated in the Maryknoll Sisters Medical Clinic in Pusan, Korea. Presentation was made in Brooklyn, N. Y., to Sister Magdalena, R.N., and to South Korean Vice Consul S. J. Chyun, by Stephen Klein, president of Barton's.

Sister Magdalena is the former Catherine Ulrich of Our Lady of Perpetual Help parish in Rochester. A graduate of Nazareth Academy, she received her nurse's training at Providence Hospital in Seattle, Wash.

Sister Magdalena was in Rochester recently visiting her brothers, John and George Ulrich, both of Chalmers Road. She has been a missioner in China and other parts of the Orient for 15 years.

By Mary Lennon Snyder

Continuing the quotations from the book on parental blessing from which I quoted last week we read:

"Nowadays a person so rarely sees parents bless their children, that he is inclined to think the privilege no longer exists. Has the parental blessing lost its efficacy in the New Testament? Has Christ's coming changed the essential relations between parent and child? Has matrimony, elevated by the Savior to the dignity of a Sacrament, been lowered in spiritual values? Most certainly not! Jesus, in the New Testament has increased the number and capacity of the channels of grace, of which the parental blessing is one.

"Parental blessing is a parental blessing still. These scattered family and the empty hearth are but the concomitant of parental blessing neglected. If this Sacrament of the Domestic Hearth were more frequently administered, there would be more happy and contented families. The two indispensable factors of happiness in a home are amiable authority on the part of parents, and loving obedience on the part of children. 'PARENTS THAT bless are more keenly conscious of their responsible dignity. In their power to bless they recognize the channel of grace that they do not want to obstruct by dissolving example.

"It is easy for a child to see God's representation in a parent and before whom it frequently kneels for blessing. With this recognition come the boy's reverence and obedience, children owe to their parents.

"If your home is not all that you would like it to be, try adding the following ingredients: education, love, reverence, and obedience. You get them all, and much more, too, out of the parental blessing. There are 'the things that make the home cut of which saints come forth.'

"IN THE LIVES of the saints and the saintly, we find many beautiful examples that help to spur us on in fostering this worthy custom. The last words of the mother of St. Gregory of Nyssa, were her words of benediction pronounced over her ten children, some of them absent some present. The dying mother of St. Edmund called her boy from Paris to England to bestow on him her blessing. The Blessed Thomas More, even when a married man, advanced in years and of official dignity—he was Lord Chancellor of England—never left his father's house without that aged parent's blessing.

"THE LITTLE FLOWER of Jesus, whose charming childlike sanctity has made her so popular, undoubtedly owes some of her exalted holiness to her parents' blessing. The custom of blessing the children prevailed in the home of the Little Flower. In her autobiography she expressly mentions the blessing received from her father on one momentous occasion. It was the day she entered the convent. Hear her speak for herself: The next morning, after a last look at the happy home of my childhood, I set out for Carmel, where we all heard Mass (April 9, 1882). I embraced all my dear ones, and knelt for my father's blessing. He, too, knelt down and blessed me through his tears."

Catholic Broadcasters Meet, Study Radio-TV Apostolate

Charlotte, N. C. (NC) — How to get Catholic broadcasts across to non-Catholics will be studied at a three-day convention of the Catholic Broadcasters' Association here.

Catholic radio and television broadcasters from throughout the nation will meet from June 25 through 27 for discussions that will center on the theme "The Radio-TV Apostolate to Non-Catholics."

The seventh annual convention will include demonstrations of religious radio and TV programs that have been successful in the past. The exhibition of radio-casting and television tools.

At a convention Mass, Bishop Vincent S. Wallace of Raleigh will deliver a sermon on the importance of the radio-television apostolate.

Radio and TV experts will be featured speakers. Father John Bradley, biblical editor, will talk on apologetic methods. Vice President Kenneth Treadwell of radio station WBT will outline broadcast station relationships. Radio performers, Lewis Martin and Fletcher Austin will discuss broadcasting techniques.

OTHER SPEAKERS will include Father Peter Conroy, president of the Catholic Broadcasters' Association (NC). A drastic sequence from "French Line" must be completely eliminated if the film is to be shown in Boston, the Board of Censors ruled here. The Board's decision was unanimous on the film, which is distributed without approval by the movie Great Administration and which has met with censorious trouble throughout the country.
