Released-Time Legal in Vermont
Montpelier, Vt.—(RNS)—Public school children in Vermont may be released from classes for "off premise" religious instruction at the discretion of local school authorities, it was ruled here by State Attorney General F. Elliott Barber Jr.

Vermont's Constitution "does not contemplate such an absolute separation of Church and State" as to prohibit so-called released-time programs, he said, but "on the contrary provides for a Christian state" through encouragement of religious practices and protection for religious denominations and sects.

"If the school directors believe that a program of released time for religious instruction or worship is to be desired and such a program does not otherwise conflict with the required curricula," the attorney general said, "it is our opinion that such a program not only would be legal but probably something in the nature of encouragement to religious practices as was expressly contemplated in the language of the Vermont Constitution."

The state's top legal authority pointed out, however, that religious classes held on public school property would be in direct violation of both the State and Federal Constitutions, regardless of whether they are offered equally to all denominations.

Steeler Coach Bach Noted in Football

Joe Bach, a balding, broad-shouldered gentleman of 52 years, who is best remembered as one of Notre Dame's Seven Mules, completed an unusual cycle when he stepped as head coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers football team in 1951.

For this was the second time within the previous 17 years that Bach had been nominated as head coach of the Pittsburgh club—a situation probably without parallel in the National Football League's long history.

Bach first became head coach of Pittsburgh in 1935. He stayed two seasons before returning to the collegiate coaching ranks. Very few people in football today have had a richer athletic background than Bach. He was starting on his 30th year of coaching this fall.

ON SEPT. 1, Bach will head his Steelers in a charity exhibition game against the Philadelphia Eagles at Aquinas Stadium. Bach presently is turning up his Steelers at their St. Bonaventure University training camp in Olean.

Bach started his long coaching career at Syracuse University as an assistant. Later he succeeded his old Notre Dame teammate, Elmer Layden, as coach of Duquesne. Bach gave the Dukes one of the strongest teams in the school's history. His 1934 team was among the nation's leading scorers.

Later he also coached at Niagara University before returning to the pros. The Rochester Council, Knights of Columbus, sponsor of the exhibition game, announces that tickets may be purchased by contacting the Columbus Civic Center, 50 Chestnut St., Telephone BAKER 3983. The game is scheduled to start at 8 p.m.

'Huk' Rebels Show Faith Still Alive

Manila, P. I.—(NC)—Priests attending wounded Huk prisoners here find that their faith has remained alive even though they have long taken part in communist-inspired guerrilla warfare.

The Huks—members of a communist-inspired rebel movement—have shown, upon questioning, that they know nothing about the tenets of communism. They joined the movement on the strength of promises that their living conditions would be improved. An added impetus, they claim, was the ruthless cruelty of government soldiers who abused the natives in their effort to get information on the Huks.

Informed Catholic sources here say the Huks are all ordinary men who, not knowing any better, were swept by the growing popularity of the movement and some hope of relieving their impoverished conditions. The Catholic Women's League has done much for their spiritual enrichment. Through the league, a priest is regularly brought in to hear confessions and celebrate Mass, and the prisoners say the rosary in common weekly.

Catholic School Buys Presbyterian Church
Trenton, N. J.—(NC)—A former Presbyterian church here will be transformed into an annex for Cathedral High School to provide for the rapid expansion of the school's enrollment.

The former Third Presbyterian Church was purchased by St. Mary's Cathedral parish and will help this fall to lessen school crowding.

According to Magr. Richard T. Crean, cathedral rector and vicar general of the Trenton diocese, freshman enrollment for the coming school year exceeds 320 as compared to a graduation class of 175 last June. Enrollment at the school is over the 1,000 mark.

New Dormitory
New Orleans—(NC)—Construction of a men's dormitory costing $678,000 will begin soon on the campus of Xavier University with completion expected within a year.
