BORN CATHOLICS, by F. J. Sheed, Sheed & Ward, 1854, 278 pp. $3.50. Available at Tudor's.

I have just finished reading a most satisfying book — the longest, finest, deepest after-dinner conversation, running into the small hours, that I have every been privileged to hear. The company was various, not all V.F.W.s, not all equally skilled in intimate expression, but all the more congenial company for that, and all born Catholics or "rocking-house Catholics" (in since early childhood, and so named by Caryl Houselander). As an absorbed listener, I was intensely interested in the after-page with mind and memory and heart, even sometimes with the tears and awe of worship that God's astounding charities must produce.

what it has been like to be a Catholic. Ostensibly they are answering the question that might make sense to one of another faith, but it is always of horror to any Catholic: "Why are you still a Catholic?" The possibility of not remaining one when you are one, instantly establishes itself as a proposition worse than any death.

Catholicity is God-established life with God. Walking out of it is possible only to the ignorant.

BENEDICTINE

I am reminded that men from these few 'centres' of learning are frequently called down to Washington once a week to be determinant of other drifters and am glad to remember that a few Catholics are present.

OCELY HASTINGS, an English Catholic journalist and Evenden Guild speaker, will take you off your feet with the rushing intelligence of her analyses. Her brilliant judgments come in waves — you get salt in your eyes and seaweed in your mouth swimming back to see if you could mean what she has said but it's worth it and she does mean it. She insists that without the Church many use pressure when they should be exemplifying the primacy of spirituality means. By all means share the debate — see if you agree. don't, wholly, but experience

Sister Jane, SSPS, energetic Rochester-born missionary working in the African Gold Coast has sent an open letter to all present and future members of the Blessed Martin de Porres Missionary Guild.

Lack of material means and the poverty of the natives are chief drawbacks to the boundless ambition of the Gold Coast missionaries, according to Sister Jane.

The former Evelyn LeFrois of Rochester, Sister Jane is a graduate of St. Boniface Parochial School and the Academy of the Sacred Heart. She has been stationed in the Gold Coast of Africa for the past nine years.

health and education to a lot of our people and the lepers is a wonderful thing," she said, "but the most wonderful thing is to bring them God."

WHAT DOES sister need to accomplish this work? "Above all prayer," she said, "and then your yearly subscription of one dollar."

Guard members have pledged their support to Sister Jane in her great cause. Officers of the Guild are Mrs. Herbert L. Kibbe, president; Mrs. Fred Weir, secretary; and Mrs. Walter N. [name obscured].
