WHAT'S DOING AT THE DALY'S
Thanksgiving 1954

Getting ready for Thanksgiving used to be a long, long chore. I'm not talking now about the "olden days" of the Pilgrim fathers, when they had to go out and shoot a turkey in a field while keeping themselves from getting scalped by the Indians, when mother had to raise the pumpkins for her pies, then pick, steam and strain the things, render her own lard, build up a good fire in the stove for the baking...
Such a comparatively short time ago as when our older children were tots, pre-Thanksgiving preparations took days. There was the long damask cloth to iron, the turkey to singe and clean, cranberries to pick over and stew, hours spent in preparing vegetables...
We were using canned pumpkin even then, so the pies weren't much different, but the rest of that big dinner preparation! It's a breeze to cook a turkey dinner now, what with clean, frozen or fresh turkeys of moderate size, prepared dressing, frozen vegetable-canned cranberry sauce, pressure cooker for potatoes, ready-to-roll-out pastry, and even frozen made-pies. And lace cloths or place mats have generally replaced the long damask.
MAYBE IT'S because all of us have turkey so much often that Thanksgiving is no longer THE turkey day. Perhaps it is the ease of getting it ready. At any rate, it's fortunate that we have other traditional family customs and practices which settle this special day to say "Thank You."
In our faith, we have the priceless gift of the Mass.
The voluntary, family participation in Mass on this day, which is neither a Holy Day of Obligation nor a have-to-get-up-anyway day, is undoubtedly the finest way we can say "Thank You" and really mean it—bringing into the open that often-neglected virtue of gratitude.
And gratitude can spread well beyond our own families: on that day, too. In our work in schools, in recreational activities, we meet and know people for whom this can be a mighty lonesome day—people far away from their own families. Boarding-house meals, hotel or hot-shoppo dinners are all right most days—but not on Thanksgiving!
EVEN THAT quick-to-get-together turkey dinner described above is a real home dinner when friends are there to enjoy it too, when the table is fixed up with a fancy cornucopia of fruits and nuts as centerpiece, with the good glasses out, the best silver and crystal, and with the "specialties of the house" which appear only on that day.

We've found that with turkey appearing on the table all during the year—Easter, Fourth of July, and weekends when it's "on special"—it's wise to save at least part of the fixings for use only on Thanksgiving and Christmas. Cranberry sauce, it seems, sort of has to go with turkey, whenever you have it—also sauerkraut in some parts of the country.
But when it comes to the rutabagas mashed with plenty of butter and a dash of nutmeg, well that's for Thanksgiving definitely. Members of the family at our house, who would choke on rutabagas ordinarily, eat them with relish on that day. Same way with creamed boiled onions. Even the turkey stuffing has its own holiday air, a stuffing we use at no other time—chestnuts!
EVER MAKE chestnut dressing? It's mighty rich, it takes a bit of extra time to prepare, but it's delicious. Just boil a pound or so of chestnuts for about 15 minutes, peel the skins off and while they are still hot, push them through a sieve or colander. Add them to the dressing, either the prepared kind or your own make—(toasted bread, broken up and mixed with celery and onion sautéed in plenty of butter, a bit of sage, plenty of celery seed, dried parsley and a half-teaspoon of baking powder to keep the dressing light.)
We're so fond of this that I usually make twice the amount of dressing, and restuff the bird when it makes its re-appearance the Saturday or Sunday following Thanksgiving. Even with only a half turkey left, there's room for dressing.
With ease of preparation, ease of cleaning up, thanks to new housekeeping gadgets, there's a more time and energy for homemakers to enter into the real spirit of Thanksgiving!

Let Us Spray!
Ilgan, Philippine Islands (INC) — During a catechism class here, Columban Father William Adams had been at pains to stress the importance of keeping holy water in the home.
He soon had good reason to know how deeply his advice had been taken to heart.
The next day, children staged a "run" on his holy water supply. They brought bottles, jars, cans, glasses, cups, even buckets.
Father Adams thought he had seen every imaginable type of container. But just as the stock was giving out, a little Filipino toddled in with a spray gun.

$125,000 Campaign For New School Slated

First steps in a campaign to raise a $125,000 building fund for a new school and convent were taken by parishioners of Our Lady of Lourdes Parish, Elmira, in the rectory at 120 Fairmont Road, last week.
Preliminary steps for the drive included naming a general committee and selection of advisory committees and division leaders. The drive is set for Dec. 5 to 11, and will include both a special gift and general solicitation. Campaign headquarters are in the church hall.
AN OPENING DINNER scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 5, in the church hall will be the signal for more than 200 workers to begin the parish solicitation. His Excellency Bishop Kearney will be the principal speaker.
Architects' plans for the new building show a modern design, two-story structure which will be approximately 214 ft. long on Demarest Parkway and 92 ft. long on West Third Street. The first story will comprise an eight-classroom school complete with audio-visual room, library, and kindergarten. The second floor will be the convent, plans include accommodations for eight nuns, complete with chapel. Future plans also include a combination gymnasium and auditorium.
THE EXTERIOR of the proposed school will have a base of field stone to match the present church on W. Church St., the balance of the exterior will be of an attractive brick composition. It is estimated the finished school will be able to accommodate over 300 pupils.
The Rev. Leo G. Schwab, pastor, is honorary chairman of the fund-raising campaign with the Rev. L. Emmett Davis, assistant pastor, as honorary vice chairman.
Parish workers are headed by J. Albert Coughlin and Dr. Gerald P. Connelly, co-general chairmen; special gifts, Matthew E. Kennedy, chairman, and Lawrence W. Hastings and Leo E. Considine, vice chairmen; general solicitation, Mortimer L. McInerney, chairman, and Daniel F. Kennedy and Cressy A. Mowrey, vice chairmen.
Members of the advisory committee are J. Joseph MacNamara, Paul J. McLane, Francis T. Woods, William D. Hovey, Joseph

E. Chely, William J. Murphy, Dr. James A. Mark, James E. Casey, John D. Fawley, Thomas J. Maxey, Charles T. Burke, John R. Melvin, E. William DeFilippo and John E. Sullivan.
