Religious Leaders Protest Code For Summer Camps

New York — (RNS) — Protestant and Catholic leaders here voiced the fear that a proposed city code regulating all summer programs for children threatens the free exercise of religion.

The code was recommended by the advisory group for the day camp unit of the Department of Health. It would regulate all summer programs for children aged 6 through 13 that run five hours a week or more, three weeks or longer.

CHURCHES AND synagogues with summer day camps and religious schools would be required, under the code, to obtain a permit. It would be granted only if the church or synagogue could meet 20 pages of detailed regulations.

These include rules dealing with the training and attitude of personnel and qualifications of workers who would have to meet if the church is to conduct summer teaching or recreation programs.

At present, churches are merely required to obtain a city certificate of occupancy covering basic sanitary and safety regulations.

In a memorandum to ministers and church workers, the Protestant Council of the City of New York said the proposed code "threatens the separation of Church and State and the free exercise of religion."

A CATHOLIC spokesman said the code would necessitate the church "asking the city for permission to teach religion." He condemned it as a violation of Church-State separation.

The Protestant Council pointed out in its memorandum that there is a vast difference between licensing a church building "for safety and sanitation" and licensing a church program.

"The latter seems to all of us who have studied the matter an exceedingly dangerous precedent threatening as it does the basic principles of our democracy," the memorandum stated.

The Department of Health said it was planning several hearings on the code.

Church Takes Step To End Rio Slums
Rio De Janeiro — (RNS) — A campaign to solve Rio de Janeiro's most urgent social problem — providing the city's 500,000 slum dwellers with decent habitation — has been undertaken by the Roman Catholic Church.

Under the direction of Auxiliary Bishop Heider, Camara the city's parish will be backed by the city's government and private firms.

Tito Amnesty List Includes Clergymen

Trieste — (NC) — The names of 18 Yugoslav clergymen were reported on a list of more than 1,000 political prisoners whose sentences were wiped out or reduced under a general amnesty issued by Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia to mark the 10th anniversary of the communist-dominated republic.

It was not known here whether any of the clergymen were Catholics. It is estimated that more than 200 Catholic priests have been imprisoned by the Tito regime, many because of their opposition to the state-supported "association of priests."
