

Funeral Held For Father Bruton

Solemn Pontifical Funeral Mass for the late Rev. Charles J. Bruton was offered by His Excellency, Bishop James E. Kearney at St. Margaret Mary Church, Rochester, Tuesday, April 18, at 10:30 a. m.

FATHER BRUTON was pastor and founder of St. Margaret Mary parish.

Following the funeral Mass, the eulogy was preached by the Very Rev. Msgr. Gregory Dugan, former assistant pastor to Father Bruton.

Monsignor Dugan said that Father Bruton's goal throughout his priesthood was ever to bring to the hearts and minds of people the good message of God's love for each and every man.

Father Bruton has endeared himself to countless people, — parishioners, young and old, members of civic and patriotic organizations, — people of high and low estate, the apostle said.

The deceased pastor was also noted for his generosity. "He was generous with his time and his possessions to all who were in need," stated Monsignor Dugan.

Father Bruton died suddenly Friday night, April 6, 1956 at his rectory in Schofield Rd. He was 65 years old.

Survivors include his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Bruton, Churchville, three brothers, Willis J. of Rochester, Leslie R. and J. Vernon of Churchville, and several nieces and nephews.

Prices of the diocese chartered the Office of the Dead on Monday evening in St. Margaret Mary, where Father Bruton's body lay in state.

A TELEGRAM addressed to the Congregation from Shanghai had read in substance: "Bishop Ignatius Kung has been imprisoned according to the law for anti-patriotism; hence (Father) Francis Xavier Tsang was canonically elected Vicar Capitular of the Diocese of Shanghai." The message was signed by (Father) Ignatius ZI, president of the "Council."

White House Conference Provide Equal Aid For All Pupils President Told

Washington — (RNS) — The planning committee of the White House Conference on Education recommended to President Eisenhower that the 4,500,000 pupils attending religious and other private schools receive "basic health and safety services" at public expense.

The proposal was made in the final report on the conference here last Nov. 28 Dec. 1 and attended by 2,000 delegates from all over the country.

Nell McElroy of Cincinnati, chairman of the committee, presented the report to the President. He is president of Proctor and Gamble Company.

IN ST. LOUIS, where it ended its annual convention shortly after announcement of the committee report, the National Catholic Educational Association urged in a resolution "the enactment of legislation to give basic health and safety services to both public and non-public school children."

The NCEA resolution noted the recommendation of the White House committee and added that the U. S. Supreme Court has ruled such services may be supplied by use of public funds.

The White House Committee frankly conceded that "only small parts" of the Church-State relations question in the field of education have been resolved. But it nevertheless urged that "all children, regardless of whether they be enrolled in public or non-public schools, receive basic health and safety services at public expense."

The committee added, however, that "the extent to which these services should go, and the question of which public funds should be used to provide them, must be determined at the state and community levels."

In St. Louis where he was attending the Catholic Educational Association convention, Msgr. William E. McManus, assistant director of the National Catholic Welfare Conference and one of the 34 persons on the White House committee, was asked what the phrase "basic health and safety services" meant.

McManus said, "The phrase 'basic health and safety services' means that the committee evidently intended the phrase to include such items as low fees, school lunches, police shots and possible health examinations."

From the very beginning of the nation's history, the White House committee added, non-public schools have been expected to be increased by at least another 1,000,000 in the next four years.

Praying Catholic parents for insisting on Catholic education for their children, the primate declared that their demands cannot be met until more members of religious orders and lay persons can be trained for teaching.

Bishop Harrington said that the present record enrollment of 4,500,000 Catholic schools and colleges is expected to be increased by at least another 1,000,000 in the next four years.

Teacher Lack Said Church's Major Problem

St. Louis — (RNS) — An urgent need for more teachers was rated a major problem of Catholic schools in this country by speakers at the 53rd annual convention of the National Catholic Educational Association.

Attending the sessions were 8,500 teachers, supervisors and administrators representing Catholic education from kindergarten to graduate and professional levels.

The teacher shortage problem was described by Bishop Bryan J. McElroy, rector of the Catholic University of America, as the "most formidable" challenge that America's Catholic schools face today. Along with this, he said, goes a demand for better training of teachers.

"We ourselves," the bishop said, "are largely responsible for this challenge. In a way we have created it by the success achieved in improving our schools."

The need for more teachers also was emphasized by Auxiliary Bishop Joseph A. Manning of Kansas City, Mo. He noted that at present from 60 to 65 per cent of all Catholic children attend Catholic elementary schools and from 35 to 40 per cent are in Catholic high schools.

It is now impossible to educate all Catholic children in Catholic schools, the bishop said, because of a shortage of trained teachers and the desire to hold high academic standards.
