THE PICTURE THAT REMAINS
A short time ago, in the reception room of our Home, we overheard a young woman say: "He seemed so much at peace, so natural... that helped so much." In time of bereavement there is so little real solace one can give that it felt good to know that we had helped... even a little. For, over and above the service we perform, we strive to help the living and to ease the sorrow of a most difficult time.

Johnny: "What makes the new baby at your house cry so much, Tommy?"

Tommy: "He doesn't cry so very much — and anyway, if all your teeth were out, your hair off, and your legs so weak you couldn't stand on them, I guess you'd feel like crying yourself."
